Culpeper attempted to make medical treatments more accessible to laypersons by educating them about maintaining their health Ultimately his ambition was to reform the system of medicine by questioning traditional methods and knowledge and exploring new solutions for ill health The systematisation of the use of herbals by Culpeper was a key development in the evolution of modern pharmaceuticals most of which originally had herbal origins Culpeper's emphasis on reason rather than tradition is reflected in the introduction to his Complete Herbal though his definition of reason was not that different from the Romantic philosophies of the era presenting nature as refuge He was one of the most well known astrological botanists of his day pairing the plants and diseases with planetary influences countering illnesses with nostrums that were paired with an opposing planetary influence Combining remedial care with Galenic humoral philosophy and questionable astrology he forged a strangely workable system of medicine combined with his Singles forceful commentaries Culpeper was a widely read source for medical treatment in his time Alternative Medicine, 1985 Culpeper's Complete Herbal Nicholas
