Cultural Transformation And Religious Practice:

Cultural Transformation and Religious Practice Graham Ward, 2005 The book sets out to address and answer three questions from the point of view of Christian theology The first is from where does theology speak The second is what are the mechanisms whereby cultures change The third is how might we conceive the relationship between the contemporary production of theological discourse and the transformation of cultures more generally Drawing upon the work of standpoint epistemologists cultural anthropologists and social scientists the book argues that public acts of interpretation are involvements in renegotiating the future direction of cultural change Though the enquiry is conducted from one particular standpoint Christian theology the observations and suggestions it makes regarding cultural transformation and the defense it makes of syncretism have more general application

Trinitarian Responses to Worldliness Heejun Yang, 2022-07-11 Are you a seminarian scholar who wants to go further from your school's Barthian tradition The purpose of this book is to connect cutting edge post Barthian trinitarian theological movements all around the world postliberal theology Yale school in the US radical orthodoxy Cambridge school in the UK German radical hermeneutic theology Zurich school in the German speaking world and the theology of inculturation Korean Methodist school in Asia Although each theological movement had a tremendous impact on the entire area of theology there has been no work done to connect those twenty first century theological trends The strength of this book is that it connects different theological movements with the author's own unique view as a Korean theologian Comparing different Trinitarian theological movements the author argues for the necessity of a God focused theology to embrace different human understandings in a world where Christianity is not dominant The book claims that Christians can pursue a genuine dialectics of differentiation and interdependence when they understand the global phenomenon of Christianity's inculturation as the work of the Trinity who relates Godself to different worldly cultures
