

Culturally Speaking

Often when we speak of Indian Culture our heart fills with pride – a 5000 year old legacy that lives with us in myriad ways, in the way we eat, the houses that we live in, the clothes we wear, the music we listen to, the games we play.... an endless list, you could think of filling up too....

An obvious thing to say would be how we keep changing through all of this, over years, decades and centuries.... don't we hear our parents often comment – " wasn't like this during our time". Maybe their parents were saying that to them as well....

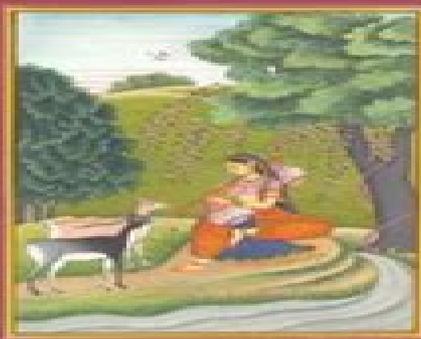

So some of these things that are very much a part of our daily lives have stayed with us, changed, evolved over a period of time due to various influences – social, political, economic and keep redefining what we call "Indian Culture". You will be surprised to know that the Kurta that your Father or you wear actually came to us from Persia or that the doors in your house or your ancestral home borrow from Roman Arches....

So what is it actually? How does it appear in our lives? Basically what we are doing defining our culture is what we see, recognize and imbibe the richness and versatility of diverse communities and societies.....

This is what makes our lives colourful, exciting, entertaining, making us creative people both in our deeds and our interests....

Walk with us in this journey to know how we are, what we are, Culturally.... Help us define what is Indian....

Through various examples of everyday life we bring to you a celebration of the melting pot that our culture is – The Kurta that we wear, The jalebi that we eat with relish, the language that we speak, the kites that we enjoy flying and many such...
