

The Canfield Decision

A comprehensive record of serious national difficulties and high drama played out in the nation's cities at the height of the Great Depression, this book provides a unique and essential record for the people's history and future.

In 1932, a group of leading business leaders and politicians from the Middle West, including William W. Aldrich, President Hoover's Secretary of Commerce, and Charles D. Harbo, Governor of Illinois, met in Chicago to discuss the economic situation and to propose a plan for recovery.

From 1932 to the late 1930s, the United States was a country of economic hardship, unemployment, and political instability. The people were hungry, homeless, and desperate. The nation's future was uncertain. The Canfield Decision was a turning point in the nation's history.

The Canfield Decision was the first of a series of reports on the economic situation in the United States. It was a landmark document in the history of the United States.
