International Education Hubs Jane Knight, 2013-09-11 Education hubs are the newest development in the international higher education landscape. Countries, zones, and cities are trying to position themselves as reputed centres for higher education and research. But given higher education's current preoccupation with competitiveness, branding, and economic benefits, are education hubs merely a fad, a branding exercise, or are they an important innovation worthy of serious investment and attention? This book tries to answer the question through a systematic and comparative analysis of the rationales, actors, policies, plans, and accomplishments for six serious country-level education hubs: United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Singapore, and Botswana. The in-depth case studies show that one size does not fit all. A variety of factors drive countries to prepare and position themselves as an education hub. They include income generation, soft power, modernization of the domestic tertiary education sector, economic competitiveness, need for a trained work force, and most importantly, a desire to move towards a knowledge or service-based economy. In response to these different motivations, three different types of education hubs are being developed: the student hub, talent hub, and knowledge innovation hub. Scholars, policy makers, professionals, students, and senior decision makers from education, economics, geography, public policy, trade, migration, will find that this book challenges some assumptions about crossborder education and provides new insights and information.

International Books in Print, 1997 Professional Identities Shirley Ardener, Fiona Moore, 2007-08-01 In both professional and academic fields, there is increasing interest in the way in which white-collar workers engage with institutions and networks, which are complex social constructions. Covering a wide variety of countries and types of organization, this volume examines the diverse ways in which individuals' ethnic, gender, corporate, and professional identities interact. This book brings together fields often viewed in isolation: ethnographies of groups traditionally studied by anthropologists in new organisational contexts and examinations of the role of identity in corporate life, opening up new perspectives on central areas of contemporary human activity. It will be of great interest to those concerned with practical management of institutions, as well as those of us who find ourselves working within them.

The authors, an international group of distinguished scholars, address a varied set of specific issues reflecting Professor Lewis' research interests, covering topics which include technological change in agriculture, analyses of unemployment and income distribution, the role of government policy in the development process, the historical record of development, and the relationship between developed and developing nations. The book will be of interest to both the academic researcher and practicing professionals in the
