On January 17th 1779 the HMS Resolution under the command of Captain James Cook and the HMS Discovery under the command of Captain Charles Clerke anchored for the first time in a shallow bay on the west of Hawaii which the natives called Kealahou Bay. Immediately the ships were surrounded by a huge crowd of Indians, either swimming around them or circling them in canoes. Cook describes the situation in his journal: "I have nowhere in this Sea seen such a number of people assembled at one place besides those in the canoes. All the shore of the bay was covered with people and hundreds were swimming about the ships like shoals of fish. Due to a lack of understanding the natives' language, Cook and his crew had no chance of realizing that all those people had gathered not only to greet strangers from across the ocean but to celebrate the arrival of their god Lono, who was believed to have sailed across the ocean in search of his wife in time immemorial and was due to return. In his last journal entry, Cook writes to enrich our voyage with a discovery which though the last seemed in every respect to be the most important that had hitherto been made by Europeans throughout the extent of the Pacific Ocean."

The Last Voyage of Captain James Cook Richard Hough, 1979 Recreates in detail Captain Cook's third and last great voyage of discovery, delineating the paradoxical characters of the officers of the two ships, many exotic ports of call, and the series of mishaps, follies, and misunderstandings that led to Cook's murder.
