

Reported suicide rates, 1992

Reported annual death rate from suicide per 100,000 people. Suicide deaths are underreported in many countries due to social stigma and cultural or legal concerns. This data has not been adjusted for underreporting, and comparisons may be affected by differences in measurement.

Note: Reported rates are based on the 'underlying cause of death' listed on death certificates. To allow for comparisons between countries and over time, this metric is age-standardized².

1. Underlying cause of death The 'underlying cause of death' is defined by the World Health Organization as: a) the disease or injury which initiated the train of morbid events leading directly to death, or b) the circumstances of the accident or violence which produced the fatal injury. All deaths may not be registered with a cause of death, especially if there is a lack of medical records for the person deceased, a lack of doctors, nurses, or hospitals nearby, or if the country has a poorly functioning vital registration system.

You can read more about how causes of death are determined in our article: How are causes of death registered around the world?

2. Age standardization Age standardization is an adjustment that makes it possible to compare populations with different age structures, by standardizing them to a common reference population.
