

The Birth Lottery: Changing the Odds

Bringing new life into the world is one of the most dangerous things a woman can do.'

Unfortunately, the chances that a new mother and her baby will survive or go on to thrive are vastly different depending on where in the world they live.

One of the most crucial factors for survival of each mother and child is having the right intervention or tool – drug, device, diagnostic – at the right time. That simple fact – having the right tool, or not having it – can mean the difference between life and death.

Global health research and development (R&D) is the process that creates new tools to save lives or adapts existing technologies to make them better suited to poor and remote settings where electricity, refrigeration, transport and skilled health staff are hard to come by.

These innovations can change the fates of mothers and babies for the better, and improve the interconnected fortunes of whole families, communities and nations.
