Industry Carles Brasó Broggi, 2016-04-29 The aim of this book is to track the historical origins of China's economic reforms from the 1920s and 1930s. Strong ties were built between Chinese textile industrialists and foreign machinery importers in Shanghai and the Yangzi Delta. Despite the fragmentation of China, the contribution of these networks to the modernization of the country was important and longstanding. Facing the challenge of growing in a fragmented country, Chinese textile firms such as Dafeng, Dacheng, and Lixin focused on urban markets and also on importing technology for upgrading their production. When the war against Japan blocked trade routes inside China, these networks were concentrated in Shanghai, where they envisaged an export-oriented development strategy for China that was based on importing machinery and exporting manufactured products. However, this strategy was only implemented precariously in Shanghai while the city stood as a neutral space in the first years of the Japanese occupation but was only consolidated in Hong Kong in the late 1940s, where textile industrialists and most of the foreign importers migrated. These networks were thus reestablished in Hong Kong, where they contributed to the city's industrialization in the Cold War period. Meanwhile, the Chinese industrialists that stayed in Shanghai and the Yangzi Delta had to adapt to the Maoist regime and were progressively incorporated into the state-owned companies or the local government agencies such as the United Front or the Textile Bureaus. However, from the early 1970s, the links between Hong Kong and Shanghai were reactivated, and these networks played again a key role in the modernization of China, especially regarding the imports of technology and exports of manufactured goods. The book ends with the first joint ventures between Hong Kong businessmen and Chinese local administrations that took place in the beginnings of China's economic reforms in 1979.

Brief Guide to the Chinese Woven Fabrics Victoria and Albert Museum, Department of Textiles, A. D. Howell Smith, 1925

Weaving China's Past Claudia Brown, Robert D. Mowry, 2000 Western admiration of China's silk textiles dates back at least to the days of the Roman empire. The establishment of the Chinese republic caused a large number of imperial costumes no longer needed for court ritual to enter collectors' hands. Textiles curators have studied these in depth, yet American museums are just recently beginning to explore the broader topic of Chinese textiles and to present splendid examples of the art along with porcelains, bronzes, enamels, and other decorative art traditions of China. Weaving China's Past examines an extraordinary private collection of Chinese textiles of diverse styles, functions, and techniques. The collection is remarkable for its chronological expanse, with works ranging in date from the Song (960-1279) and Jin (1115-1234) dynasties through the Qing dynasty (1644-1911). The book examines the relationship of these textiles to the greater fabric of Chinese art. Pieces in the collection have been subjected to microscopic examination and radiocarbon dating, as well as full examination by a textiles conservator, and the results of these studies are included. The yarn type, thread count, weave, and supplementary materials are identified. Several of the brocades feature gold fibers, and these have been analyzed to identify specific techniques. A remarkable discovery was the use of peacock feathers twisted with silk fibers in a kesi woven during the Qing dynasty. The study of Chinese silk textiles, like the study of Chinese ceramics and metalwork offers a glimpse into a complex tradition in which both organized industry and individual creativity played a role. Traditional China viewed spinning, weaving, and embroidery as divinely inspired arts to be practiced dutifully in the home. Concurrently, however, luxury textiles were commissioned for religious, state, and private use. Silk was essential in China's foreign policy, used along with gifts of tea and silver to pacify borderlands. Together with porcelain, silk became a major commodity for export to Europe. Elaborate techniques were developed for producing complex designs in both brocade and embroidery. During China's later dynasties, textile arts were pursued as fine arts, appreciated on equal footing with painting and calligraphy.

Victoria & Albert Pattern: Chinese Textiles Yueh-Siang Chang, 2011-06-01. Features a portion of the museum's Chinese textile collection that showcases some of the patterns and fabrics used in Chinese design. Chinese Clothing Valery M. Garrett, 1994. With nearly 300 illustrations and an accessible text, Chinese Clothing: An Illustrated Guide presents 600 years of the development of Chinese dress from the beginnings of the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) to the present day. While providing a full treatment of Imperial robes and textiles, the author also documents several areas of costume design overlooked by earlier writers, such as children's wear, rural clothing, and wedding and funeral attire. Chinese Art Roger Fry, Laurence Binyon, Albert Frank Kendrick, Bernard Rackham, Walter Perceval Yetts, Osvald Sirén, W. W. Winkworth, 1925. Our object in producing this book is to supply information about Chinese art that is at once authoritative and introductory. To many, it may seem curious that no previous volume of the kind exists, but to those who know the extreme difficulty of a detailed study of even one part of Chinese art, with its enormous periods and its close relationship to Eastern ideas, it may rather seem curious that anyone should attempt such a summary. We should not have given way to the desire to make such a book had we not known how valuable it would be if properly produced, and had we not felt that we had hit upon the right plan.
