China's Foreign Political and Economic Relations Sebastian Heilmann, Dirk H. Schmidt, 2014-01-09 This balanced and thoughtful book presents a thorough analysis of the dynamics of China's foreign relations Sebastian Heilmann and Dirk H Schmidt provide a comprehensive and discriminating view of the complex often competing factors domestic influences regional tensions global uncertainties that shape Chinese foreign policy They portray the PRC as a land of multiple identities a nation that is becoming more assertive in East Asia as it explores novel approaches to its foreign economic policies while simultaneously displaying thin skinned sensitivities when confronted with international criticism The authors argue that unconventional approaches to foreign relations in particular a unique combination of long term strategies with multilevel policy experiments are driving Chinese global expansion The provocative and challenging final chapter designed to spur discussion considers China's imperial identity warring against the decentralized activities conducted in the shadow of the empire Illicit transnational guerilla like networks have thus become powerful driving forces behind the continued development of China's foreign policy as well as its foreign trade relations. The authors contend that the activities of these niche nomads with their largely invisible or chameleon-like presence constitute the most alarming dimension of China's foreign relations as they gain ground and resources in many parts of the world with the potential to shake the very foundations of other societies.

Chinese Military Diplomacy, 2003-2016 Kenneth W. Allen (Retired Air Force officer), John Chen, Phillip Charles Saunders, 2017. This publication provides a history of Chinese military diplomacy from 2003 to 2016 and discusses future implications of this diplomacy for the United States and the international community. Excerpted from Chinese Military Diplomacy 2003-2016 Trends and Implications. China is placing increasing emphasis on military diplomacy to advance its foreign policy objectives and shape its security environment. Military diplomacy is subordinate to and intended to serve national foreign policy objectives which determine the relative priority the People's Liberation Army (PLA) places on regions and individual countries. Most PLA diplomatic activity consists of senior level meetings carried out by the Defense Minister, the Chief of General Staff (now Chief of the Joint Staff) and the Deputy Chief of General Staff (now Deputy Chief of the Joint Staff) who handles foreign affairs and intelligence. The PLA engages in nontraditional security cooperation with a range of partners to demonstrate that a stronger PLA can play a positive regional security role. The PLA has begun to participate in more combat-related exercises and competitions with Russia and Central Asian countries. PLA military diplomacy is focused primarily on major powers such as Russia and the United States and on Asian countries on China's periphery. Military diplomatic activity does not necessarily translate into influence and many routine activities may not be significant. Activity may reflect the quality of bilateral relations rather than be a means of developing them. Military diplomacy can help establish communications and crisis management mechanisms with China and may also encourage Chinese adherence to international rules and norms. China's Use of Military Force in Foreign Affairs Markus B. Liegl, 2017-03-16. This book explains why China has resorted to the use of large-scale military force in foreign affairs. How will China use its growing military might in coming crisis and existing conflicts? This book contributes to the current debate on the future of the Asia-Pacific region by examining why China has resorted to using military force in the past. Utilizing fresh theoretical insights on the causes of interstate war and employing a sophisticated methodological framework, the book provides detailed analyses of China's intervention in the Korean War, the Sino-Indian War, China's border clashes with the Soviet Union, and the Sino-Vietnamese War. It argues that China did not employ military force in these wars for the sake of national security or because of material issues under contestation as frequently claimed.

Rather the book's findings strongly suggest that considerations about China's international status and relative standing are the principal reasons for China's decision to engage in military force in these instances. When reflecting the study's central insight back onto China's contemporary territorial conflicts and problematic bilateral relationships, it is argued that the People's Republic is still a status-seeking and thus highly status-sensitive actor. As a result, China's status ambitions should be very carefully observed and well taken into account when interacting with the PRC. This book will be of much interest to students of Chinese foreign policy, Asian politics, military and strategic studies, and IR in general.
