Chapter 1-Summary:

Objective 1 :Explaining why accounting is the language of business.

- A. Accounting is an information system that measures business activities, processes data into reports, and reports results to decision makers. (Financial statements/balance sheets report this information to users)

- B. Accounting information is used by:
 - 1. Managers: to set goals, evaluate those goals and take corrective action
 - 2. Investors: to decide whether to invest in a business or evaluate an investment
 - 3. Creditors: to evaluate a borrowers ability to make required payments
 - 4. Government and regulatory bodies such as Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) to ensure organizations pay for the correct amount of taxes
 - 5. Individuals to make investment decisions and/or manage a bank account
 - 6. Not-for-profit organizations which use accounting information in virtually the same way as profit organizations

- A. Accounting information can be classified into two categories:
 - 1. Financial accounting: provides information for managers inside the business and for decision makers outside the organization, such as investor and creditors
 - 2. Managerial accounting: generates inside information for internal use by management

- A. Types of business organizations
 - 1. Proprietorship: an unincorporated business with a single owner. The owner has unlimited liability which means that the owner assumes personal responsibility for the debts of the business
 - 2. Partnership: an unincorporated business owned by two or more owners. Each partner has unlimited liability
 - 3. Corporation: an incorporated business owned by shareholders whose ownership is evidenced by the number of shares held. A shareholder has limited liability. A corporation is distinct from its owners and has many of the rights entitled to a person.

Objective 2: Explain accounting's conceptual framework and underlying assumptions

- A. Generally Accepted Accounting principles or (GAAP) are the professional guidelines that govern how accountants record, measure and report financial information.

- A. The overall objective of financial reporting is to provide useful information to users to make investing and lending decisions. The characteristics of useful information include: relevance, faithful representation, comparability, verifiability, timeliness and understandability.
 - 1. The relevance characteristic must be considered to ensure the financial statements provide information to the user that is useful. Information must provide predictive and/or confirmatory value.
 - 2. The faithful representation (or reliability) characteristic states that accounting records should be based on accurate data. The actual cost of assets or services is usually more reliable than market value.
