Middle Atlantic Prehistory Heather A. Wholey,Carole L. Nash,2018-03-05 Regional identities and practices are often debated in American archaeology but Middle Atlantic prehistorians have largely refrained from such discussions focusing instead on creating chronologies and studying socio political evolution from the perspective of sub regions What is Middle Atlantic prehistoric archaeology What are the questions and methods that identify our practice in this region or connect research in our region to larger anthropological themes Middle Atlantic Prehistory Foundations and Practice provides a basic survey of Middle Atlantic prehistoric archaeology and serves as an important reference for situating the development of Middle Atlantic prehistoric archaeology within the present context of culture area studies This edited volume is a regional historic overview of important themes topics and approaches in Middle Atlantic prehistory covering major practical and theoretical debates and controversies in the region and in the discipline Each chapter is holistic in its review of the historical development of a particular theme in evaluating its contributions to current scholarship and in proposing future directions for productive scholarly work Contributing authors represent the full range of professional practice in archaeology and include university professors cultural resources professionals government regulatory review archaeologists and museums curators with many years of practical and theoretical immersion in his her chapter topic and is highly regarded in the discipline and in the region for their expertise Middle Atlantic Prehistory provides a much needed synthesis and historical overview for academic and cultural resource archaeologists and independent scholars working in the Middle Atlantic region in particular

Lithic Raw Material Economies in Late Glacial and Early Postglacial Europe Lynn E. Fisher,Berit Valentin Eriksen,2002 Lithic assemblages have always been an important source of information sometimes the only source on human activities in Late Glacial and Early Postglacial Europe These twelve papers some of which were given at the 59th Annual SAA meeting in Arnheim in 1994 here revised present comparative lithic material from across Europe

Prehistoric Flintwork Chris Butler,2005 Flint was vital for prehistoric societies from the Mesolithic hunter gatherers down to Bronze Age farmers Chris Butler describes how the different diagnostic flint implements were used in each period and how they were produced The author further explores what the analysis of flintwork can tell us about early man s use of the landscape such as how and where flint was obtained settlement manufacturing and ritual sites and the eventual decline in the importance of flint The book is the fruit of 20 years research into flint assemblages Living with the Flood Samantha Paul, Kevin Colls, Henry Chapman, 2015-11-30

The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more

Clovis Blade Technology Michael B. Collins, Marvin Kay, 2010-07-22 Around 11 000 years ago a Paleoindian culture known to us as Clovis occupied much of North America Considered to be among the continent's earliest human inhabitants the Clovis peoples were probably nomadic hunters and gatherers whose remaining traces include camp sites and caches of goods stored for utilitarian or ritual purposes This book offers the first comprehensive study of a little known aspect of Clovis culture stone blade technology Michael Collins introduces the topic with a close look at the nature of blades and the techniques of their manufacture followed by a discussion of the full spectrum of Clovis lithic technology and how blade production relates to the production of other stone tools He then provides a full report of the discovery and examination of fourteen blades found in 1988 in the Keven Davis Cache in Navarro County Texas Collins also presents a comparative study of known and presumed Clovis blades from many sites discusses the Clovis peoples caching practices and considers what lithic technology and caching behavior can add to our knowledge of Clovis lifeways These findings will be important reading for both specialists and amateurs who are piecing together the puzzle of the peopling of the Americas since the manufacture of blades is a trait that Clovis peoples shared with the Upper Paleolithic peoples in Europe and northern Asia
