

DRUG TESTING PROCEDURES

Drug and alcohol abuse can leave workers and commercial motor vehicle (CMV) drivers impaired, and those employing workers in safety-sensitive positions need to be aware of drug testing procedures.

SUBMITTING TO TESTING

Drivers must submit to drug and alcohol tests under "direct observation" conditions, under which an observer of the same gender as the employee must watch the employee urinating directly into a collection container.

FAILING OR REFUSING

If a driver tests positive or refuses a drug test, the driver should be removed from duty, and the employer must provide the driver with a list of acceptable substance abuse professionals (SAPs). The driver must then begin the treatment and return-to-duty process.

RETURN-TO-DUTY

Once a driver has completed the return-to-duty process and tested negative for drug use, an SAP may sign a return-to-duty report. However, the driver is subject to follow-up testing, which consists of a minimum of 6 unannounced, directly observed tests, conducted during the first 12 months following the return-to-duty test.

SAP DRUG REPORTS

SAPs also submit reports to the FMCSA's Drug and Alcohol Clearinghouse detailing a driver's return-to-duty activities, including:

- Driver's name, date of birth, commercial driver's license (CDL) number, and state of issuance
- Date of initial SAP assessment
- Date the SAP determined the driver demonstrated successful compliance with education and treatment requirements and is eligible for return-to-duty testing
