Proceedings of the 1985 Annual Meeting ACL,1985-09-01 Grading Knowledge Steffen Staab,1999-12-08 This book develops concise and comprehensive concepts for extracting degree information from natural language texts First an overview of the ParseTalk information extraction system is given Then from the review of relevant linguistic literature the author derives two distinct categories of natural language degree expressions and proposes knowledge intensive algorithms to handle their analyses in the ParseTalk system Moreover for inferencing the author generalizes from well known constraint propagation mechanisms The concepts and methods developed are applied to text domains from medical diagnosis and information technology magazines The conclusion of the book gives an integration of all three levels of understanding resulting in more advanced and more efficient information extraction mechanisms Natural Language Generation in

Artificial Intelligence and Computational Linguistics Cecile L. Paris,William R. Swartout,William C. Mann,2013-03-14 One of the aims of Natural Language Processing is to facilitate the use of computers by allowing their users to communicate in natural language There are two important aspects to person machine communication understanding and generating While natural language understanding has been a major focus of research natural language generation is a relatively new and increasingly active field of research This book presents an overview of the state of the art in natural language generation describing both new results and directions for new research The principal emphasis of natural language generation is not only to facilitate the use of computers but also to develop a computational theory of human language ability In doing so it is a tool for extending clarifying and verifying theories that have been put forth in linguistics psychology and sociology about how people communicate A natural language generator will typically have access to a large body of knowledge from which to select information to present to users as well as number of expressing it Generating a text can thus be seen as a problem of various ways decision making under multiple constraints constraints from the propositional knowledge at hand from the linguistic tools available from the communicative goals and intentions to be achieved from the audience the text is aimed at and from the situation and past discourse Researchers in generation try to identify the factors involved in this process and determine how best to represent the factors and their dependencies California. Richard F.E. Sutcliffe,2023-11-27 The task of language engineering is to develop the technology for building computer systems which can perform useful linguistic tasks such as machine assisted translation text retrieval message classification and document summarisation Such systems often require the use of a parser which can extract specific types of grammatical data from pre defined classes of input text There are many parsers already available for use in language engineering systems However many different linguistic formalisms and parsing algorithms are employed Grammatical coverage varies as does the nature of the syntactic information extracted Direct comparison between systems is difficult because each is likely to have been evaluated using different test criteria In this volume eight different parsers are applied to the same task that of analysing a set of sentences derived from software instruction manuals Each parser is presented in a separate chapter Evaluation of performance is carried out using a standard set of criteria with the results being presented in a set of tables which have the same format for each system Three additional chapters provide further analysis of the results as well as discussing possible approaches to the standardisation of parse tree data Five parse trees are provided for each system in an appendix allowing further direct comparison between systems by the reader The book will be of interest to students researchers and practitioners in the areas of computational linguistics computer science information retrieval language engineering linguistics and machine assisted translation
