Going Out David Nasaw,1999-04-15 David Nasaw has written a sparkling social history of twentieth century show business and of the new American public that assembled in the city's pleasure palaces parks theaters nickelodeons world's fair midways and dance halls The new amusement centers welcomed women men and children native born and immigrant rich poor and middling Only African Americans were excluded or segregated in the audience though they were overrepresented in parodic form on stage This stigmatization of the African American Nasaw argues was the glue that cemented an otherwise disparate audience muting social distinctions among whites and creating a common national culture

Working-Class Hollywood Steven J. Ross,2020-06-30 This path breaking book reveals how Hollywood became Hollywood and what that meant for the politics of America and American film Working Class Hollywood tells the story of filmmaking in the first three decades of the twentieth century a time when going to the movies could transform lives and when the cinema was a battleground for control of American consciousness Steven Ross documents the rise of a working class film movement that challenged the dominant political ideas of the day Between 1907 and 1930 worker filmmakers repeatedly clashed with censors movie industry leaders and federal agencies over the kinds of images and subjects audiences would be allowed to see The outcome of these battles was critical to our own times for the victors got to shape the meaning of class in twentieth century America Surveying several hundred movies made by or about working men and women Ross shows how filmmakers were far more concerned with class conflict during the silent era than at any subsequent time Directors like Charlie Chaplin D W Griffith and William de Mille made movies that defended working people and chastised their enemies Worker filmmakers went a step further and produced movies from A Martyr to His Cause 1911 to The Gastonia Textile Strike 1929 that depicted a unified working class using strikes unions and socialism to transform a nation J Edgar Hoover considered these class conscious productions so dangerous that he assigned secret agents to spy on worker filmmakers Liberal and radical films declined in the 1920s as an emerging Hollywood studio system pressured by censors and Wall Street investors pushed American film in increasingly conservative directions Appealing to people's dreams of luxury and upward mobility studios produced lavish fantasy films that shifted popular attention away from the problems of the workplace and toward the pleasures of the new consumer society While worker filmmakers were trying to heighten class consciousness Hollywood producers were suggesting that class no longer mattered Working Class Hollywood shows how silent films helped shape the modern belief that we are a classless nation     Marquee ,1928     Film Histories Sharon Monteith,Mark Jancovich,Paul Grainge,2007-01-11 A wide ranging introduction to film history this anthology covers the history of film from 1895 to the present day The book is arranged chronologically and each chapter contains an introduction by the editors on the key developments within the period followed by a classic piece of historical research about that period Various types of film history are undertaken in the articles so that students can become familiar with different types of film historical research For example topics include the history of audiences exhibition marketing censorship aesthetic history political history and historical reception studies The book is therefore designed to provide students with a narrative history spine while simultaneously introducing them to different approaches to the study and research of film history Concentrating on the plurality of the historical turn in film studies this book demonstrates that film history is and should be about more than simply key films directors and movements Key features Contains a preface that explains the structure and organisation of the book Chapter introductions provide a chronological sense of international developments Includes key articles of film history that illustrate differences in methodological approach and which are devoted both to America and to a wide range of non American contexts     Arris ,2002     Yale Tales Boeder Van Harlan,1901     Boston Home Journal ,1898     The Buckinghamshire Miscellany Robert Gibbs,1891     Hollywood Anecdotes Paul F.
