C. Thomas, Denis Mareschal, Victoria Knowland,2021-05-16 This influential festschrift honours the legacy of Annette Karmiloff Smith a seminal thinker in the field of child development and a pioneer in developmental cognitive neuroscience The current volume brings together many of the researchers collaborators and students who worked with Professor Karmiloff Smith to show how her ideas have influenced and continue to influence their own research Over four parts each covering a different phase or domain of Karmiloff Smith's research career leading developmental psychologists in cognition neuroscience and computer science reflect on her extensive contribution from her early work with Piaget in Geneva to her innovative research project investigating children with Down syndrome to understand the mechanisms of Alzheimer's disease The chapters provide a mix of cutting edge science and reminiscence providing a fascinating insight into the historical contexts in which many of Annette's theoretical insights arose including such ideas as the microgenetic approach representational redescription and neuroconstructivism The chapters also provide updates about how earlier theoretical ideas have stood the test of time and present unpublished data from the early years of Annette's career Taking Development Seriously is essential reading for students and scholars in child development and developmental neuroscience The DVD-laser Disc Newsletter ,2004 Eureka Chad Orzel,2014-12-09 When it comes to science too often people say I just don't have the brains for it and leave it at that Why is science so intimidating and why do people let themselves feel this way What makes one person a scientist and another disinclined even to learn how to read graphs The idea that scientists are people who wear lab coats and are somehow smarter than the rest of us is a common yet dangerous misconception that puts science on an intimidating pedestal How did science become so divorced from everyday experience In Eureka science popularizer Chad Orzel argues that even the people who are most forthright about hating science are doing science often without even knowing it Orzel shows that science is central to the human experience every human can think like a scientist and regularly does so in the course of everyday activities The common misconception is that science is a body of boring abstract often mathematical facts In truth science is a process Looking at the world Thinking about what makes it work Testing your mental model by comparing it to reality and Telling others about your results all things that people do daily By revealing the connection between the everyday activities that people do solving crossword puzzles playing sports or even watching mystery shows on television and the processes used to make great scientific discoveries Eureka shows that this process is one everybody uses regularly and something that anyone can do
