A Convergence Of Lives:

A Convergence of Lives Ann Hibner Koblitz,1983 A Convergence of Lives KOBLOITZ,1984-01-01 The second half of the nineteenth century was an exciting time in European intellectual and social history The period saw the growth of revolutionary activism the rise of Darwinian evolutionary biology the emergence of women's rights movements and other challenges to established ways of thinking Progress and change were the key words of the day and most members of the educated classes felt confident that the future would be bright In Russia especially the intelligentsia an amorphous peculiarly Russian class of professors writers and thinkers had the feeling that they were on the threshold of a great new age Russia's ignominious defeat in the Crimean War in 1856 signaled to many that wide ranging political and social reforms were urgently needed Most of the intelligentsia hoped that the defeat would be followed by the emancipation of the serfs modernization of education moves toward the equality of women and other reforms It was in this period that the Russian intelligentsia developed into an influential social group that concerned itself with much more than just cogitation and empty philosophizing During the second half of the nineteenth century Russian intellectuals increasingly assumed burdens that their counterparts in other European countries considered outside their province The intelligentsia became the source of most political and social activism in Russia the social conscience and often the sole voice of protest against autocratic and reactionary policies

The Women of the Moon Daniel R. Altschuler,Fernando J. Ballesteros,2019-07-04 Philosophers and poets in times past tried to figure out why the stainless moon smoothly polished like a diamond in Dante's words had stains The agreed solution was that like a mirror it reflected the imperfect Earth Today we smile but it was a clever way to understand the Moon in a manner that was consistent with the beliefs of their age The Moon is no longer the thing We see it as often as the Sun and give it little thought we've become indifferent However the Moon does reflect more than just sunlight The Moon or more precisely the nomenclature of lunar craters still holds up a mirror to an important aspect of human history Of the 1586 craters that have been named honoring philosophers and scientists only 28 honor a woman These 28 women of the Moon present us with an opportunity to meditate on this gap but perhaps more significantly they offer us an opportunity to talk about their lives mostly unknown today Biographies of Scientists for Sci-Tech Libraries Tony Stankus,2019-12-05 This book first published in 1991 is an invaluable guide to biographies of scientists from a wide variety of scientific fields The books selected for this highly descriptive bibliography help librarians shatter readers' stereotypes of scientists as monomaniacal and uninteresting people by providing interesting and provocative titles to capture the interest of students and other readers The biographies included in this very special bibliography were carefully selected for their humour and human insights to give future scientists encouragement inspiration and an understanding of the origins of particular scientific fields These biographies are unique in that they explore the whole personality of the scientist giving students a glimpse at the variety and drama of the lives beyond well known contributions or Nobel prize accomplishments

The Armour Engineer, 1914

Trade, Globalization and Development Rajat Acharyya, Sugata Marjit, 2013-06-18 This book was written in honour of Professor Kalyan K Sanyal who was an excellent educator and renowned scholar in the field of international economics One of his research papers co authored with Ronald Jones entitled The Theory of Trade in Middle Products and published in American Economic Review in 1982 was a seminal work in the field of international trade theory

This paper would go on to inspire many subsequent significant works by researchers across the globe on trade in intermediate goods. The larger impact of any paper beyond the number of citations lies in terms of the passion it sparks among younger researchers to pursue new questions. Measured by this yardstick, Sanyal's contribution in trade theory will undoubtedly be regarded as historic. After completing his Ph.D. at the University of Rochester, he joined the Department of Economics at Calcutta University in the early 1980s and taught trade theory there for almost three decades. His insights, articulation, and brilliance in teaching international economics have influenced and shaped the intellectual development of many of his students. After his sudden passing in February 2012, his students and colleagues organized a symposium in his honour at the Department of Economics, Jadavpur University, from April 19 to 20, 2012. This book, a small tribute to his intellect and contribution, has been a follow-up on that endeavour and a collective effort of many people, including his teachers, friends, colleagues, and students. In a nutshell, it discusses intermediation of various kinds with significant implications for market integration through trade and finance. That trade can generate many non-trade service sector links has recently emerged as a topic of growing concern and can trace its lineage back to the idea of the middle product, a recurring concept in Prof. Sanyal's work.

The age we live in: a history of the nineteenth century (James Taylor, 1882) Transactions of the Faculty of Actuaries (Faculty of Actuaries in Scotland, 1909) List of members Popular Science Monthly and World Advance, 1884 The Popular Science Monthly, 1884 The Rural Midwest Since World War II (Joseph Leslie Anderson, 2014). J. L. Anderson seeks to change the belief that the Midwest lacks the kind of geographic coherence, historical issues, and cultural touchstones that have informed regional identity in the American South, West, and Northeast. The goal of this illuminating volume is to demonstrate uniqueness in a region that has always been amorphous and is increasingly so. Midwesterners are a dynamic people who shaped the physical and social landscapes of the great midsection of the nation and they are presented as such in this volume that offers a general yet informed overview of the region after World War II. The contributors, most of whom are Midwesterners by birth or residence, seek to better understand a particular piece of rural America, a place too often caricatured, misunderstood, and ignored. However, the rural landscape has experienced agricultural diversity and major shifts in land use. Farmers in the region have successfully raised new commodities from dairy and cherries to mint and sugar beets. The region has also been a place where community leaders fought to improve their economic and social well-being, women redefined their roles on the farm, and minorities asserted their own version of the American Dream. The rural Midwest is a regional melting pot, and contributors to this volume do not set out to sing its praises or, by contrast, assume the position of Midwestern modesty and self-deprecation. The essays herein rewrite the narrative of rural decline and crisis and show, through solid research and impeccable scholarship, that rural Midwesterners have confronted and created challenges uniquely their own.
