Zimbabwe Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Foreign Affairs Committee, 2002 In February 2002 as the general elections in Zimbabwe approached the Committee published a short Report placing on the record evidence received about the deteriorating political and economic situation in that country This Report contains an analysis of the situation before and since the March 2002 elections together with conclusions and recommendations The Committee finds that since 1980 Robert Mugabe has deliberately and systematically flouted the rule of law in Zimbabwe has lost the moral right to govern his people and by abusing their fundamental rights and freedoms he has earned their contempt and that of the international community and has transformed himself from a respected statesman into an outcast The report also deals with the response by the United Kingdom the Commonwealth European Union United Nations and Zimbabwe s neighbours to the current crisis The UK is under a particular obligation to assist because as the former colonial power it still has a residual responsibility Yet because it is the former colonial power the United Kingdom s actions are viewed with suspicion and mistrust for the time being it must therefore work with and through other countries and international agencies
