

PROFESSIONAL ETHICS AND TEACHER EDUCATION: A CRITIQUE

Prof. Hemant Lata Sharma* and Leena Sharma**

ABSTRACT:

Teacher occupies a central place and key role in any scheme of work connected with education. Therefore, the teachers must uphold the highest ethical standards of the profession to earn the respect, trust and confidence of students, parents and other members of community. This paper addresses the challenges and constraints in the implementation of training and development programs with regard to professional ethics in teaching in large education systems.

The scope of the training and development challenge is revealed by posing a series of questions. Some of these questions go the heart of the professional learning discourse.

INTRODUCTION

Professional ethics encompass the personal, organizational and corporate standards of behaviour expected of professionals. Professionals and those working in acknowledged professions, exercise specialist knowledge and skill. How the use of this knowledge should be governed when providing a service to the public can be considered a moral issue and is termed Professional Ethics. Professionals are capable of making judgments, applying their skills and reaching informed decisions in situations that the general public cannot, because they have not received the relevant training. One of the earliest examples of professional ethics is probably the Hippocratic Oath to which medical doctors still adhere to this day.

For example, a lay member of the public should not be held responsible for failing to act to save a car crash victim because they could not give an appropriate emergency treatment. This is because they do not have the relevant knowledge and experience. In contrast, a fully trained doctor (with the correct equipment) would be capable of making the correct diagnosis and carrying out appropriate procedures. Failure of a doctor to help in such a situation would generally be regarded as negligent and unethical. An untrained person would not be considered to be negligent for failing to act in such circumstances and might indeed be considered to be negligent for acting and potentially causing more damage and possible loss of life.

A business may approach a professional engineer to certify the safety of a project which is not safe. Whilst one engineer may refuse to certify the project on moral grounds, the business may find a less scrupulous engineer who will be prepared to certify the project for a bribe, thus saving the business the expense of redesigning.

The Importance of Upholding Personal and Professional Ethics

- The teacher should conduct themselves- both inside and outside the teaching environment- in a positive manner that students might emulate.
- The teacher should be a model of ethical behavior both in the school environment and in public places.
- The teacher must understand the unique demands placed on teachers because students are required to be in their care.
