

Strengths And Weaknesses Of Social Research Methods

Social research methods can be defined as "academic research on topics relating to questions relevant to the social scientific fields" (Dryman, 2015, p.3). The theoretical perspective relating to the nature of the social world, also known as their ontological position, and how they may find out about the social world, known as their epistemological position will influence the methods they use, and the conclusions drawn from these methods. In this essay, the first section explains the theoretical perspectives, ethics and methodological discussion surrounding social research methods. The second section draws on my own experiences of undertaking a qualitative interview, and aims to critically analyse the strengths and weaknesses and how these would be overcome in the future. Social Work Research and Evaluation Richard M. Grinnell, Yvonne A. Unrau, 2005 This book is the longest standing and most widely adopted text in the field of social work research and evaluation Since the first edition in 1981 it has been designed to provide beginning social work students the basic methodological foundation they need in order to successfully complete more advanced research courses that focus on single system designs or program evaluations Its content is explained in extraordinarily clear everyday language which is then illustrated with social work examples that social work students not only can understand but appreciate as well Many of the examples concern women and minorities and special emphasis is given to the application of research methods to the study of these groups Without a doubt the major strength of this book is that it is written by social workers for social work students The editors have once again secured an excellent and diverse group of social work research educators The 31 contributors know firsthand from their own extensive teaching and practice experiences what social work students need to know in relation to research They have subjected themselves to a discipline totally uncommon in compendia that is writing in terms of what is most needed for an integrated basic research methods book rather than writing in line with their own predilections
