Das Glück Gertrud Höhler,1984 Der Duft von Glück Ladina Bordoli,2025-11-01 Die Erfindung der zartschmelzenden Schokolade Schweiz 1879 Amelie Ammann arbeitet mit großer Begeisterung in der revolutionären Schokoladenfabrik Cailler Die Chefin Fanny Peter Cailler sieht sie bereits als ihre Nachfolgerin Dann aber lernt Amelie den attraktiven Schokoladenpionier Rodolphe Lindt kennen und verliebt sich Hals über Kopf in ihn Für ihn zieht sie nach Bern und wird zu Rodolphes rechter Hand in seiner Fabrik Es ist eine verrückte Zeit voller Leidenschaft und Erfindergeist Nach einer Weile jedoch muss sich Amelie eingestehen dass Rodolphes Liebe in erster Linie der Schokolade gilt Enttäuscht wendet sie sich von ihm ab und heiratet den charmanten Arzt Wilhelm Vergessen kann sie Rodolphe Lindt und die Welt der Schokolade allerdings nicht Und dann trifft sie Rodolphe unverhofft wieder Drei gegen das Glück Jan-Michael Dettmer,2025-08-05 Die Menschheit lebt seit Zehntausenden von Jahren in einem nie zuvor gekanntem Zeitalter des Friedens und des Glücks Niemand sieht einen Grund diesen Zustand zu hinterfragen und so bemerkt auch niemand da auf dieses unverdiente Glück Schatten fallen Dean ist ein typisches Kind dieses Goldenen Zeitalters Als er auf der Urlaubswelt Orplis Shandron kennenlernt einen der exotischen Silbernen und die zwei sich ineinander verlieben ahnt keiner der beiden da sie damit einen Prozeß in Gang setzen der diese glückliche raffr immer verändern wird Den Silbernen wird ein Hang zur Geheimniskrämerei nachgesagt Dean erkennt bald da diese Gerichte nicht völlig ohne Grundlage sind denn Shandron steht in einem ungewöhnlichen Verhältnis zu seinem Bruder Cimeo Ein vergessenes Grabmal und die Beziehung der Brüder werfen Fragen auf welche die Beteiligten unversehens in die Intrigen ferner Vorzeit verwickeln und damit ihre Existenzgrundlagen erschüttern Und so stehen am Ende DREI GEGEN DAS GLÜCK Die Erzählung verbindet die vorausgegangenen Bände Die Gebote des Ordens und Jeschurun zu einer lockeren Trilogie The Dark Year of Dundee: A Tale of the Scottish Reformation Deborah Alcock,2012-01-01 The Dark Year of Dundee may be called a tale of Fact since Fiction has only been employed in it as the handmaid of Truth and for the purpose of throwing a more vivid light upon scenes and events that actually occurred The story slight as it is may not inaptly be likened to the sheath or calyx that encloses and protects the yet unopened bud When the flower unfolds its petals the calyx has fulfilled its work and hidden from the eye no longer attracts the thoughts and attention of the spectator Thus it has been intended only to leave upon the reader's mind the impression of one grand and simple character only to tell plainly and briefly the story of one who long ago laboured abundantly and endured nobly for Christ's sake strengthened with all might according to his glorious power And no alloy of fiction has been admitted into what is here recorded of George Wishart for apart from any other consideration such a character as his is God's workmanship and it would seem impossible to add anything to the great Artist's design without marring its beauty and completeness It was the early summer of the year 1544 and the shadow of a dark cloud was already looming over every home in Dundee God's terrible angel of the pestilence stood with his sword outstretched as of old over guilty Jerusalem but no eye was opened to behold him as yet no one suspected the danger and the anguish at hand In a small room of one of the high dark houses of the old town a pretty modest looking young girl sat spinning and singing as she spun in a sweet though rather listless voice Now and then she glanced anxiously at the door or rose to pay some little attention to the kail for the mid day repast Although the meal could scarcely have been intended for more than two persons the fire necessary for its preparation increased uncomfortably the heat of the narrow room Guid day Mary said a girl about her own age or a little older entering without ceremony The new comer was tall and strongly made and without the smallest pretensions to beauty had an honest open countenance She held in her hand a large bunch of the pretty field flowers so well known in Scotland as blue bells Look what I hae brocht ye sin ye tell me ye come frae the hills I thocht ye'd like them maybe to mind ye of yer auld hame Mary Wigton eagerly took the flowers thanked her friend with many expressions of delight and a moment or two afterwards burst into tears Honest Janet Duncan was considerably disconcerted by the effect produced by her gift Weel to be sure she ejaculated gin I didna think they'd hae pleased ye Sae they hae said Mary recovering herself quickly It was naebut a wee thocht of the auld hame and the auld times and the heather and gowans on the bonnie Sidlaw hills But it's nae use thinking lang Noo father's farm is sold it's no like we'll ever gae back again Where did ye get thae blue bells Janet Archie the ne'er-do-weel played the truant frae his schule wi a when idle callants like himsel and gaed out owre the Law and Balgay Hill I'm afeard when Jamie comes ben and hears it he'll be sair angered An it's no wonnerfu when he's focht as he has to keep the lad to his schuling and he nae mair himsel but a puir journeyman baxter He's a guid brither to ye Janet Ye may say just that Then as a new thought struck her she contradicted herself energetically Na he's nae guid brither but the best brither in a Dundee Left but father or mither or friend in the wide warld wha wad hae thocht he could hae keepit us thegither and fended for us sae weel I can turn my hand to mony a thing thank the saints but there's Archie and Effie puir bairns Archie naebut gaun threteen and unco witless and Effie a wee bit lassie Eh but we've seen hard times Mary Mary probably thought her own troubles had been greater than those of her friend but she only said in a sympathizing tone Sit ye down Janet ye re no hurried the day Janet replied in the negative for she dearly loved half an hour s chat with a friend when it could be obtained without neglecting her duties to her paragon brother Jamie or her youthful charges Archie and Effie Ye re watching for your father Ay but I m in hopes he s got a lift o wark he s sae late It s unco little he brings hame she said sadly It s ill speiring after wark in this muckle town answered Janet Why did ye no bide in the country pairts whaur a body kenned ye I tell ye There s a man here that owes father a matter o twa hundert merk that Maister Wilson wha has the muckle shop in the Nethergate and sells silks and ribbons and sic He s a rich man but he s no an honest man Janet When father loaned him the siller he was naebut a puir laddie and father helped him sin he was sib to his wife s mither Weel father s that careless he never took tent to get a bit writing forbye his word o mouth ye ken Sae when the warld gaed by ordinar ill wi him and the oats failed and the sheep dee d and he maun sell the bonnie farm his forbears held before him he thocht o Maister Wilson and his twa hundert merk and came here to look after the siller But Maister Wilson he says there s nae debt ava and that father canna prove it Whilk last is owre true wae s me Gin John that s my brither wad hae bided wi us he d hae been a braw lawyer the noo and richted us I didna ken ye had a brither Mary Oh ay there were five o us and a dee d bairns but John and mysel He was the eldest an I the youngest He was twal year aulder than I He was a clever bairn vera Father had siller to spare in thae days sae he thocht to make a man of him and sent him to St Andrews to study the law And he was sae guid and kind like and loved his book sae weel A the maisters set muckle store by him and as for father and mither he was just the licht o their een But he gaed clean daft Gaed daft Mary I canna mind mysel for I was a wee lassie the time but father told me he wasna seventeen year auld full when sic a change came owre him He grew dour and hard and wad hae nocht to do wi archery and goff and putting the stane and a thae ploys that young men use He wad gang by himsel and greet and talk of his sins It was aye and aye his sins wi him Gin he had been a thief or a murderer he couldna hae made mair to do on t Yet he was aye a guid lad and what he could hae done to gar him tak on sae nae mortal could speir Let father say what he might naething would serve him but to gie the law up and tak the priest s frock Sae that was the end on t And do ye no see him whiles Na we couldna gang to him and he wouldna come to us Father thinks he has clean forgot us Thae holy men grow unco hard to their ain folk whiles He s no John Wigton ony mair he s Sir John Wigton the priest I dinna ken whaur he is the noo and gin we met in the street ane id pass the ither by When yer mither dee d did ye no tell him How could we We re nae scholars father nor I But I trow he helped mither to her grave Weel our Jamie s no that religious but he gaes to his kirk regular and says his aves and minds his puir soul as he can Seems to me said Mary it s a hard case gin puir folks canna save their souls but they break their parents hearts But here s father Janet stayed to exchange greetings with an elderly man of respectable appearance but with something in his step voice and manner that betrayed a certain weakness and indecision of character Having answered his remark It s by ordinar hot and heavy for the time o year with a heartfelt Ye may weel say that she bade Mary good bye and hastened upstairs to the rooms in the same land which the Duncan family occupied While the father and daughter partake of their simple meal a few words may be added in explanation of the religious history which Mary had recounted to her friend much as an ignorant person might describe the appearance of some curious piece of mechanism the construction and uses of which he was alike unable to comprehend John Wigton was no very unusual character There have been obscure Dominics and Loyolas as well as village Hampdens and mute inglorious Miltons Naturally of a thoughtful temperament as he passed from boyhood into youth he began to ask himself some of those solemn questions which are the birthright of every human soul He knew but little of the great realities of the eternal world but that little sufficed to make him first anxious and then miserable He knew that sin was hateful to God and he felt himself a sinner His convictions partook of the ardour and intensity of his character he was willing to do or suffer anything so that he might escape from the wrath to come At this time perhaps John Wigton was not very far from the kingdom of heaven Had a copy of Tyndale s New Testament fallen into his hands had he heard some enlightened reformer preaching Christ and him crucified his character humanly speaking might have differed from what it actually became as light differs from darkness But Rome had him in her hands to mould and out of such materials Rome moulds fanatics from this wine she distils her sourest vinegar She did not seek to obliterate his convictions she rather strengthened though she did not properly speaking deepen them She told him little of the holiness of God s character and of the true nature of sin but she told him much of the sinner s awful doom of the fire and brimstone and the never dying worm She employed almost exclusively images of physical suffering and employed them to terrify the imagination and to shake the nerves rather than to touch the heart or the conscience And when he sought for a way of escape from all these horrors the path of penance and self mortification was opened before him He was taught to torture himself here that God might not torture him for ever hereafter for it was in such an aspect that the Lord merciful and gracious slow to anger and plenteous in goodness and truth was presented to his mind Being sincere and earnest he did all and more than all that was required of him He scourged himself he starved himself he deprived himself of necessary sleep and in many other ways which it would be neither pleasant nor profitable to enumerate he practised will worship and neglecting of the body But it would not do If the blood of bulls and goats cannot take away sin neither could a man s own blood though he were to pour it forth drop by drop and in the most painful way that even the depraved imagination of monkish inquisitors could devise John Wigton s conscience like that of many another miserable victim of Rome bore sad witness to this truth He was not at peace he was not forgiven On he went further and further upon the painful path prescribed to him still pursuing a phantom that like the mirage of the desert always eluded his grasp He did not find what he sought but something he did find which in the abnegation of all possible enjoyment and the endurance of almost all possible suffering still made life tolerable to him he found excitement he found employment for his powers and food for his pride Even apart from the praise it brought him and he who knew himself a miserable unpardoned sinner liked to hear himself called a saint he began to take a morbid but real pleasure in self infliction

But there is an old and wise saying When water ceases to quench thirst what will you drink after it It is the character of every unnatural excitement to pall with indulgence and thus John Wigton found at length that his bodily austerities ceased to afford him even temporary relief and satisfaction A stronger stimulant was required and he found it He set himself to mortify not the nerves and muscles of his body but the desires of his mind and the feelings of his heart Family affection friendship the love of study the free exercise of reason and judgment all were ruthlessly sacrificed on the altar of his faith In process of time he came to regard an impulse of tenderness towards his parents or his little sister as a kind of sinful self indulgence only greater than a soft bed or a luxurious meal And there is this difference between the grosser and the more subtle forms of self torture that while a man may perhaps educate himself into an unnatural insensibility to bodily pain without injury to the rest of his character the process of hardening his soul is equivalent to a moral self murder John Wigton dared not allow himself to love or to pity and he succeeded or thought he did in conquering these weaknesses of human nature but he paid a heavy price for his success He soon learned to regard the sufferings of others with indifference nay with joy and triumph when they advanced the interests of the Church In her service he was willing or thought he was to give his own body to be burned and it was quite as meritorious and on the whole rather more convenient to burn the bodies of other men At this point his education may be considered finished At thirty years of age he was a thorough fanatic with conscience and feeling both absorbed in one master passion And then cooler heads began to take note of him as a man who might make a useful tool when there was work to be done from which ordinary men would shrink in horror
