

DATA ANALYSIS IN SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH

CHUNURAM SOREN, Ph.D., Research Scholar in Law, Sambalpur University, Odisha, India

Abstract:

Data analysis in social science provides the statistical concepts and programming skills to conduct and evaluate social science research studies. Data analysis provides social science researchers with the tools to unlock insights and understand complex social phenomena. Researchers can interpret the data and uncover relationships and patterns to address human behaviour and social experiences. Data analysis summarizes the collected data. It involves the interpretation of data gathered through the use of analytical and logical reasoning to determine patterns, relationships, or trends. Social science researchers focus on expanding their knowledge of social dynamics. Data analysis in social science research provides empirical evidence to dig deeper and explore human experience, attitudes, interactions, and social structures. The social science data seeks researchers with training or a demonstrable aptitude for social science work and programming to refine and extend their skills through the generation, analysis, and critique of large-scale social data. The tools for such an approach are multifaceted and evolve quickly. Data analysis encompasses both quantitative and qualitative methods. Quantitative methods in social science research allow objective insights with the help of statistical analysis. Qualitative methods in social science research provide exploratory insights with the help of textual analysis. The goal of data analysis in social science is to interpret and summarise findings. Statistical analysis is playing a major role in social science research. In the present era, the top tier journal editors expect the researchers to use a scientific approach to analyse the data collected through primary or secondary sources. This knowledge will help social science researchers and teachers understand the process of analysing the data and reporting the results in their research projects using different software.
