

MR. CRESSY
in part author, with Wang Se-ling, of DAUGHTER OF CONFUCIUS
which was received by the critics as follows:

"William and fascinating . . . Apart from its vivid interest, it may claim to have extreme historical value as a record of a vanished civilization"—O. M. Coon (Business)

"Miss Wang embodies . . . current transformation of China; her story is important because it is typical . . . Her character and intelligence enabled her to move in a few years across more than twenty centuries from the green acres to the campus. Her book displays a historic's handwork of history"—Samuel Houston (Sunday Times)

"An historical document and a human document of abiding significance"—Hugh Gordon Foster (Time and Tide)

"It is charming, delightful, surprising—and of course extraordinarily informative. It is beautifully made, perception, balanced, and with the stamp of absolute emotional truth"—Professor Henry Deber

"This is deeply personal living . . . She has a novelist's skill in making these persons walk, alive and kicking, on her pages, from grandmother, head of the household, concubine, mistress, her dominant and clothed in her own never-doubted authority, moving nowhere without the company of her two beautiful slave girls, her two small dogs and her monkey; from this grandmother down to the slaves with the lovely names . . . I was enchanted to find that . . . and the humour that sustains the book comes out in such episodes as that wherein . . . I think this book may become the classic picture of the slice of Chinese society with which it deals"—Edward Irving (County Life)
