

Organizando el territorio

Ordenando su uso y ocupación

Mediante el ordenamiento territorial organizamos el uso y ocupación del territorio nacional. Diversas herramientas de planificación y gestión, incluyendo los mapas, son utilizadas para orientar la formación de ciudades y pueblos, la distribución de infraestructuras y servicios básicos, la ubicación de actividades económicas, y la protección del medio ambiente y los recursos naturales.

Regiones de montaña

La organización armónica de este territorio requiere por priorizar la protección del medio ambiente, especialmente de los bosques y la parte alta de los ríos, con el fin de asegurar la conservación de la biodiversidad y de servicios ecológicos como la regulación del ciclo hídrico.

Ciudades y pueblos

La compactación de las áreas urbanas y pobladas constituye el principal reto del ordenamiento territorial en estas zonas. Las áreas urbanas requieren ser puntos de conexión con las áreas rurales, que les proveen de energía, alimentos, agua y oportunidades de esparcimiento.

Regiones de llanura

La conservación de suelo, bosques y agua con el fin de hacer sostenible la producción agropecuaria, de energía y agua, representan los principales retos del ordenamiento territorial en las áreas rurales de llanura.

Regiones costeras

Prioriza la protección de áreas o ecosistemas frágiles, cuyo uso se ve condicionado por ser inundables y por las variaciones en la forma de la costa. La mitigación de los impactos o inundaciones o del aumento del nivel de mar, dependen de conservar la naturaleza en estas áreas.
