

Phases - Construction Documents (CD) and Construction Administration

This template covers the architectural design services phases such as Construction Documents (CD) and Construction Administration.

Construction Administration

- The Architect acts as the Owner's advocate during construction by answering contractor questions, interpreting the construction documents, and assisting with final product, material, and color selections.
- CA phase lasts for duration of construction

Construction Documents (CD)

The owner will choose to change the project scope to meet budget and time limitations until preliminary pricing is collected. Changes are integrated and the resulting design is redrafted. In compliance with the building codes and zoning ordinances that have authority, the architect may produce design documents. The architect will determine which drawings for building are appropriate. These may include:

- Site plan
- Ceiling plans
- Zoning and code information for permitting
- Door and window details
- Demolition plans
- Materials and fixtures lists
- Floor plans
- Construction details
- Sections
- General notes
- Interior and exterior elevations
