If it had not been for Aunt Alma's teacups and my cousin Pierre's eye, I might never have come to Collin County at all. Then I would have missed out on the greatest adventure of my life! Isn't that the way life always is, though? When all's said and done, it's the littlest things that make the biggest difference. And half the time you don't even know which is which until everything's over and done with.

My cousin Edith always says that the best way to tell a story is to start at the beginning, so I suppose I should backtrack a little. At least to where the trouble, and the adventure, really began. I was still living in Houston then, up on State Street. Our house was one in a line of fine two-story houses surrounded by elm and pecan trees. Most of the houses had little balconies off each of the front rooms just like the better houses in Natchez and New Orleans. It was March, and I was walking home from school just like always. At least that's what I thought at the time.

I suppose you could say I was a nose-in-the-air boy
