Internet Reconstructing Policy in Higher Education Elizabeth J. Allan, Susan Iverson, Rebecca Ropers-Huilman, 2009-10-16
Written for Higher Education Masters and PhD programs this landmark textbook joins the theory of feminist post structuralism with research methods for the purpose of policy analysis in Higher Education It showcases the different methods that can be applied to a range of topics in Higher Education policy and policy development Reconstructing Policy in Higher Education highlights the work of accomplished and award winning scholars and provides an in depth examination of theoretical frameworks and concrete examples of how feminist post structuralism effectively informs research methods and can serve as a vital tool for policy makers and analysts Resources in Education, 1987 Soaring Beyond Boundaries, 2007-01-01 Higher education systems in many countries are undergoing significant changes in response to variety of local national and international pressures Among these the shift from elitism to the provision of mass higher education increased impact of internationalization and globalization which are increasingly blurring national boundaries increased competition among universities for limited resources to support higher education sector the impact of technology and the knowledge economy and the continuing quest educational for equity Given what we already know about the position of women in the academy what is so significant about the account of women represented in this book Lessons from colleagues in Western universities provide important models for understanding some aspects of gendered identity of women scholars however a deeper understanding of educational experiences for women in countries such as China Turkey Iran Pakistan may potentially offer innovative insights to our current understanding of gender within education In this age of globalization there are common themes that transcend the experiences of women across very different social cultural economic and political contexts Therefore accounts of women scholars represented in this volume demonstrate that the experiences women scholars are not isolated incidents but global phenomena and may offer alternative approaches to problems that seem insurmountable to women at the bottom of the professional ladder Further the experiences of non Western women scholars are important because it is only through an understanding of their educational conditions that institutions can implement policies and practices to respond effectively and to create work environments that are supportive to professional aspirations of these scholars Effective policies can only be attained when there is a clear understanding of the barriers and challenges female scholars Given that gender concerns especially in non Western countries have historically occupied and to some extent continue to occupy a marginal position in the daily operations of institutions of higher education it is critical to highlight their potentially harmful effects not only on women scholars but on institutions as well ASHE Reader on Finance in Higher Education David W. Breneman, Larry L. Leslie, Richard E. Anderson, 1993 Prepares teachers for their varied roles in education reform Aim is to help readers develop and improve curriculum development skills and use these skills to implement education reform practices Also looks at multicultural education and uses case studies to apply curriculum foundations and practices to some of the many problem situations faced by today s students Faculty Governance in Higher Education

Wambach,2009 This qualitative case study is constructed to offer insight on the infrequently investigated influence of organizational culture before and after a merger between higher education institutions Respondents were selected from volunteers to form three strata of employees staff mid level management which included some faculty members and upper level administration Each subject was a member of the pre merger organization for at least three years to establish full enculturation The interviews were conducted four years after the merger The methodology included having each respondent draw a picture of how they perceived working at the pre merger organization and another picture depicting how they perceived working in the merged organization The results show that communication especially incongruence between administrative actions and the values espoused by leadership during a merger process is crucial to assimilation of pre merger culture and development of the merged entity s culture In addition employees lower in the organizational hierarchy demonstrated greater concern for the personal effects of retrenchment actions than did those in middle and upper administrative levels Another salient finding is that leadership should treat culture as a constantly evolving element within an organization When leadership treats culture development as simply another project separated from other aspects of organizational life it is less likely to meet with success The dissertation citations contained here are published with the permission of ProQuest llc Further reproduction is prohibited without permission Copies of dissertations may be obtained by Telephone 800 1 800 521 0600 Web page http://www.proquest.com/en_US/products/dissertations/individuals.shtml
