Asian Development Economic Success And Policy Lessons:

Asian Development William E. James, Seiji Naya, Gerald M. Meier, 1989 While the world's attention has been focused on the spectacular economic success of Japan and Korea the less developed countries of Asia have often been neglected Asian Development closes the gap In nontechnical style and with minimal mathematics it presents an in depth perspective on the economic development of fourteen countries in East Southeast and South Asia Asian Development is mainly a story of success Though some problems remain Asian countries have shown remarkable resilience in responding to sharp changes in the international economy oil shocks world recession and inflation exchange rate and interest rate fluctuations and rapid technological change The authors conclude that their ability to adjust to changing external conditions is closely related to intelligent governmental policies Looking back they comment In the past growth of the United States and Japan pulled up the growth rates of the smaller economies in the region Looking forward they predict In the future increasingly it will be the growth of the Asian developing countries that acts as a catalyst to growth in the more advanced economies South Asian

Economic Development Moazzem Hossain, Iyanatul Islam, Reza Kibria, 1999 The notion that South Asian economies have tended to be less successful than those of East Asia is critically examined and the reasons why discussed Countries covered include Pakistan India Bangladesh and Sri Lanka Key issues examined agriculture and rural development labour market and human resource development trade and industry policies foreign investment and technological capabilities foreign aid and economic development financial development and economic performance poverty inequality and economic development regional economic co operation green development Lessons from East Asia Danny M Leipziger, 2005-12-10 This compilation of case studies and cross country essays focuses on the role of public policy in the experience of East Asian economies A major theme running through the volume is regional learning and regional contagion the spread of that learning Beginning with the model and experience of Japan and continuing with the impressive achievements of countries originally considered unviable in the 1950s and 1960s like Korea and Taiwan contributors demonstrate how regional policy lessons permeated borders easily The 1980s brought further lessons and flows of capital to the second generation of rapid industrializers And the 1990s have seen regional contagion benefit new aspirants like Vietnam As the chapters cumulatively reveal however the transferability of lessons depends on the institutional framework in which policy is formulated the consistency of policy and the quality of implementation Part 1 includes the case studies for the first generation of rapidly developing East Asian economies the tigers while Part 2 incorporates the later generation success stories the cubs plus the Philippines a country only now beginning to show significant progress Part 3 includes cross country essays on public investment foreign direct investment and cross country patterns that synthesize the lessons learned and propose actions for other development aspirants to pursue The essays aim to fill two major gaps the paucity of country specific work on the institutional side of development policy and the failure to explain the mixed record of industrial policies in East Asia The
