Children's Rights And The Wheel Of Life:

Children's Rights and the Wheel of Life Elise Boulding, 1979 Although they make significant contributions to the world's work and well being often despite severe legal and economic handicaps and social victimization people under age twenty one and over age sixty are excluded sectors of the world population While the life situation of the young and the old varies according to cultural tradition and extent of modernization industrialization brings increasing restrictions on the young and the elderly and a load of legal and civic responsibilities on people in the narrow 25-55 age range The special cognitive emphatic and futures creating capacities of the young and the old each at their own kind of biosocial peak are therefore eliminated from the social process Boulding emphasizes two particular aspects of personhood as something that is continually growing and differentiating throughout life and the special androgynous qualities of the prepubertal and postmenopausal stages of life for males and females alike that have significant implications for the creation of more humanistic egalitarian and peaceful societies The capabilities of personhood and the age graded social institutions which pattern their expression are mismatched practices of physical as well as psychological and social abuse of the young and the old by the middle years population is increasing in industrialized countries The author proposes that age be introduced as a classificatory principle in the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights so that rights now proclaimed for all other categories of human beings except the young and the old can also be made available to these two groups She pleads for a realistic evaluation of the capacities and contributions to society of children youth and the aged and for the involvement of these excluded sectors in civil life and social and political decision making at every level from the local to the global

The Rights of the Child and the Changing Image of Childhood Philip E. Veerman, 2021-11-01 In this book Philip E Veerman presents and discusses milestones in the evolution of children's rights as well as the work of a number of important pioneers in this field in order to examine whether the concept of childhood has changed in our century With Samuel Shye's Systemic Quality of Life Model as a conceptual framework and uniform standard more than forty Declarations and Conventions are analysed and compared Veerman thus unfolds an exciting picture of the changing image of childhood starting at the beginning of this century and culminating in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child of 1989 and the World Summit for Children of 1990 Finally the author proposes together with Samuel Shye a Declaration on the Rights of the Child based on the Systemic Quality of Life Model All the important Declarations and Conventions are reprinted as appendices This makes Veerman's study a complete and up to date textbook on children's rights Dr Veerman is the coordinator of the Israel Section of Defence for Children International DCI and Fellow of the Youth Policy Center of Haifa University

Children Today, 1980     The Psychological Rights of the Child Stuart N. Hart, 1982     Children's Lives in an Era of Children's Rights Afua Twum-Danso Imoh, Nicola Ansell, 2014-01-03 The Convention on the Rights of the Child CRC which was adopted unanimously by the United Nations General Assembly in 1989 marked a turning point in the perception of children in international law and policy Although it was hoped that the Convention would have a significant and positive impact on the lives of all children this has not happened in many parts of the world This edited volume based on empirical research and Non Governmental Organisation project data explores the progress of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and to a lesser extent the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child in nine African countries in the 25 years since it was adopted by the UN General Assembly The book considers the implementation of the Convention both in terms of policy and practice and its impact on the lived experiences of children in societies across the continent focusing on specific themes such as HIV AIDS education and disability child labour witchcraft stigmatisation street children parent child relationships and child participation The book breaks new ground in blending legal and social perspectives of the experiences of children and identifies concrete ways forward for the better implementation of the CRC treaty in the various political contexts that exist in Africa     Human Rights in Theory and Practice Gregory J. Walters, 1995 well researched well presented comprehensive scholarly and up to date and will be of great usefulness to its intended audience

REFERENCE REVIEWS     Ethics John K. Roth, 2005     The International Journal of Orthodontia, 1917     Childhood and Children's Culture Flemming Mouritsen, Jens Qvortrup, 2002 For over a decade sociologically oriented childhood research and research on child culture have experienced a dramatic growth within the humanities and the social sciences as well as an increasing prominence at the institutional level This book is the meeting place of two closely related fields of research childrens culture and the history of childhood on the one hand and the sociology and anthropology of childhood on the other The two camps share a joint methodological view of children as agents in their own lives environments and even in society at large yet it is also agreed that their lives and welfare are largely formed by adults and the society in which they live Both research areas have been vital for the development of new strands of childhood research which are in many ways characterised by a departure from more conventional approaches concepts and understandings that have dominated childhood research and childhood itself in much of the 20th century The articles in the book represent numerous aspects of the two areas of research In a critical vein the sociologically and anthropologically oriented contributions cover studies of structural aspects of childhood as well as qualitative studies of childrens everyday life while the culturally oriented contributions comprise classical studies of childrens culture products history media play culture and symbolic forms of expression The articles present general differences and divergences in methods and perspectives but also show what the two types of approach have in common

The Politics of Children's Survival George Kent, 1991 The central concern of this pioneering study is the high rate of child mortality worldwide and the prospects for its reduction Taking as his major focus socioeconomic factors and their effect on children's survival George Kent asks not only what technical interventions might be undertaken within meager health budgets but also why are those budgets so inadequate He examines the social and political roots of child mortality around the world and finds that the problem arises from widespread powerlessness in the populations of less developed countries. Thus he argues remedies should center on strategies of empowerment designed in such a way that their benefits persist long after the intervention has ended. Following an introductory chapter which describes overall patterns of children's mortality, the author examines the individual and household factors which contribute to the problem and the programmatic responses associated with these factors. Subsequent chapters explore child survival in relation to larger societal issues, discussing in turn food, poverty, war, repression, and population as they affect child mortality. Kent then turns his attention to strategies for child survival that are sensitive to these social factors. Separate chapters address alternative designs of social systems, the idea of viewing children as a form of human capital, the problem of motivating the politically powerful to support child survival work, rethinking the meaning of national development, and the challenge of planning for children's survival in concrete, site-specific situations. Finally, Kent discusses the potential of national and international law and institutions for improving children's prospects. An ideal supplemental text for courses in economic development and political economy, this book is also essential reading for policymakers and relief organization managers concerned with the widespread problem of child mortality.
