Chinas Ownership Transformation Process Outcomes Prospects:

China's Ownership Transformation Ross Garnaut, 2005 China's emergence as a global economic player has been accompanied by a major internal transformation. Over the past decade the economy has made the transition from complete reliance on state owned and collective enterprise to a mixed economy where private enterprise also plays a strong role. Gaizhi, a Chinese term meaning transforming the system, has become a major phenomenon in most parts of the country. In many cases it has involved full privatization. China's Ownership Transformation applies descriptive and econometric analysis to survey and official statistical data to examine the progress of gaizhi over the years and across regions. It discusses the main players in the process, their motivation and incentives, and looks at the forms, scope, and timing of gaizhi. The authors also provide an assessment of the outcomes of gaizhi, focusing on employee issues, corporate governance issues, and firm performance. The book concludes with discussion of the issues related to the fairness and efficiency of the gaizhi process, particularly concerning the role of management buy outs and outside investors. These issues are at the center of a lively public debate in China, which is likely to influence future Chinese policies toward gaizhi. This title provides researchers, students, policymakers, and those interested in the emergence of China as a global manufacturing and economic powerhouse with in depth information on the transformation of its state owned sector. Managing Globalization: Lessons From China And India Gillian Hui Lynn Goh, David Anthony Kelly, Ramkishen S. The Dynamics of Chinese Regional Development Jane Golley,2007 This book surveys the competing or sometimes complementary roles of the state and the market in shaping China's pattern of regional development during the Communist era The uneven pace of industrialisation across China's provinces during its economic transition raises numerous questions regarding spatial patterns of industrial development in a developing transitional economy Jane Golley's book answers questions such as Why have inter regional inequalities in industrial development come to exist Why are they tending to increase How have regional policies and reform strategies impacted on these trends How if at all can these trends be reversed A comparative economic systems analysis of the Mao and Deng eras combined with theoretical and empirical evidence of the disequilibrium nature of regional development depicts the recent trend of rising inequality across China as being both inevitable and ongoing The central government's Western Development Strategy is assessed in this context The most novel contribution of the book is the development of a framework for thinking about regional development and policy which combines two distinct approaches new economic geography and comparative economic systems analysis which can be used to understand patterns of regional development anywhere in the world The application of this framework to regional development during the Mao and Deng eras provides a uniquely holistic and easy to read coverage of the topic The Dynamics of Chinese Regional Development will appeal to undergraduate and postgraduate students of the Chinese economy The book will also find an audience in scholars and researchers of Chinese and Asian studies more generally as well as students and scholars of economics political economy and regional science

What's Driving Investment in China? Steven Barnett, Ray Brooks, 2006 Investment has grown rapidly in China in recent years reaching more than 40 percent of GDP Despite good progress on bank and enterprise reforms weaknesses remain that could contribute to inefficient investment decisions Manufacturing infrastructure and real estate have been the drivers of fixed asset investment Econometric analysis presented in the paper suggests that manufacturing investment is strongly correlated with firms liquidity largely retained earnings Analysis of residential real estate investment shows that it is weakly correlated with real household income growth and real mortgage interest rates. A policy implication of these findings is that reducing liquidity in firms, for example by requiring state-owned enterprises to pay dividends to the government and using monetary policy to reduce liquidity, increase real interest rates would slow investment in manufacturing and real estate. Current and Future Issues for the PRC Economy Toshiki Kanamori, 2006. Vietnam, 20 Years of Doi Moi Ari Kokko, 2008.
