Building Trust in Government G. Shabbir Cheema, Vesselin Popovski, 2010 The ability of governments and the global community to achieve the Millennium Development Goals ensure security and promote adherence to basic standards of human rights depends on people's trust in their government However public trust in government and political institutions has been declining in both developing and developed countries in the new millennium One of the challenges in promoting trust in government is to engage citizens especially the marginalized groups and the poor into the policy process to ensure that governance is truly representative participatory and benefits all Korea Policy Review, 2006 Asian Survey, 2008

Indian Journal of Industrial Relations, 2006 Journal of East Asian Studies, 2002 The Chinese Economy, 2007 European Journal of East Asian Studies, 2008 The Silence of the Dislocated Yong-Shun Cai, 2001 □□□□, 1993 The Overseas Chinese (huaqiao) Project Shelly Chan, 2009 This dissertation examines the history of the making of the overseas Chinese huaqiao in China from 1890 to 1966 Emerged only in the 1890s the term huaqiao referred broadly to Chinese sojourning from China during the course of an expansive project to incorporate Chinese abroad into the Chinese nation The project was spearheaded in the late nineteenth century by diplomats reformers and revolutionaries all of whom operated overseas and came to view huaqiao as a vital resource This transnational vision of the nation remained central to Republican and Communist governance until the 1960s But the huaqiao project itself was marked by constant change and vast heterogeneity producing friction in many instances that upset the imagined union of China and Chinese abroad As it turned out huaqiao were not simply Chinese who lived elsewhere waiting to be awakened and led by the homeland Rather they emerged as a congeries of unruly elements encompassing intellectuals who brought conflicting ideas about nation and culture based on colonial experiences abroad in the 1920s and 1930s transnational communities that posed a seeming threat to domestic political order in the 1950s and returnees who came to Chinese shores from all backgrounds and were highly critical of government policies in the 1950s and 1960s Troubled declared obsolete in state discourses both in China and beyond during the 1960s the huaqiao project is nonetheless unfinished Revived and active is the notion that China is the cultural and ethnic homeland of Chinese globally as expressed in the new terms huaren persons of Chinese culture and huayi persons of Chinese descent The huaqiao project suggests that the making of an overseas Chinese identity always intersected with dilemmas of opportunity and belonging facing communities and nations in a globalizing world The huaqiao project is unfinished because these dilemmas were not and are unlikely to be easily resolved The Unmaking of the Chinese Proletariat William James Hurst,2005 The Structure and Evolution of Chinese Social Stratification Li Yi,Dr. Yi Li,2005-10-25 This book is a great groundbreaking work in China Studies For generations China scholars have pursued the structure of Chinese social stratification but none has completely succeeded in constructing even a single complete model
