Wallacker,1979 Walled Cities and Urban Density in China Rui Du,2018 Throughout the imperial era defensive walls surrounded Chinese cities Although most city walls have vanished the cities have survived We analyze a sample of nearly 300 prefectural level cities in China among which about half historically had city walls We document that cities that had walls in late imperial China have higher population and employment density today despite the fact that their walls have long gone Using data from various sources we test several possible explanations of this fact including 1 walled cities have a well defined historical core that helps hold economic activity close to the city center today 2 walled cities today tend to have different industry compositions that are less conducive to decentralization 3 walled cities are situated in regions where the local geographies make it less desirable to build out 4 walled cities have more compact shapes that facilitate high density development and 5 walled cities are located in regions where rural land is more valuable today and discourages urban sprawl We find that historically walled cities still have higher density after taking into account all of these factors which we interpret as evidence of economic persistence China's Coastal Cities Yue-man Yeung,Xu-wei Hu,Xuwei Hu,1992 Researches Into Chinese Superstitions Henri Doré,1917 Baptist Missionary Magazine ,1903 The Baptist Missionary Magazine ,1903 The Great Wall of China L.
