Biran Zhu,Lihua Yang ,Karsten Kristiansen,2026-02-19 Traditional Chinese Medicine TCM operates as a distinctive alternative medical approach offering a contrast to Western modalities through its holistic and natural treatment methods These practices are particularly noted for their potential in managing reproductive endocrine disorders which can cause significant health impacts By focusing on natural remedies TCM may offer effective management options with fewer side effects presenting a promising avenue for integration into modern medical protocols Epidemiological evidence also highlights a concerning link between environmental factors such as exposure to endocrine disrupting chemicals EDCs and the aggravation of reproductive health issues suggesting that TCM could play a vital role in mitigating these effects This Research Topic aims to scrutinize the efficacy of TCM in both preventing and treating reproductive endocrine disorders while uncovering the underlying mechanisms of its potential benefits It also seeks to explore the disruptive impact of EDCs on reproductive health with the goal of identifying effective biomarkers and refining therapeutic approaches within the framework of TCM This evaluation will help enhance TCM s theoretical bases and its practical application in clinical settings broadening its acceptance and utilization in global healthcare To deepen our understanding of these intersections we invite original research articles and comprehensive reviews focusing on a range of pertinent themes o Innovative TCM therapeutic strategies targeting reproductive endocrine disorders including detailed studies on herbal formulas and their active ingredients o Research into molecular and cellular mechanisms influenced by TCM in the context of reproductive endocrine regulation o Experimental studies on how TCM influences hormonal balance and maintains endocrine health o Investigations into the role of TCM in preventing and managing reproductive disorders prompted by EDCs exposure These themes emphasize the integration and innovation of traditional techniques within the sphere of modern medical research aiming to enrich both fields through shared insights and methodologies
