China was one of the areas of the world where economic activity first developed. As early as 5,000 to 6,000 years ago, people along the Yellow River valley had already started farming and raising livestock. During the Shang Dynasty (about 3,000 years ago), people learned how to smelt bronze and use iron tools. White pottery and glazed pottery were produced. Silk production was considerably developed and the world's first figured inlaid silk weaving technique was being used. During the Spring and Autumn Period steel production technologies appeared. During the Warring States Period, Li Bing and his son directed the construction of the Dujiang Dam near present-day Chengdu in Sichuan Province. This brilliant achievement in water conservancy enabled rationalized irrigation supply, flood diversion, and sand discharge. By the Han Dynasty, agriculture, handicrafts and commerce were all well developed. Zhang Qian was dispatched as a governmental envoy to the "Western Regions" (Central Asia) and in the process pioneered the route known as the "Silk Road" from Chang'an (today's Xi'an, Shaanxi Province), through Xinjiang and on finally reaching the east coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The Tang Dynasty was a particularly prosperous period in Chinese history. Agriculture, handicrafts and commerce flourished; technologies for textile manufacture and dyeing, porcelain production, smelting, metal casting, and shipbuilding were comparatively advanced. During this time, land and water transportation was also fairly well developed and economic and cultural relations with Japan, Korea, India, Persia, Arabia and other countries were extensive. During the Song and Yuan dynasties domestic and foreign trade developed rapidly. Many merchants and travellers came from abroad.

The People s Republic of China is the only large country in the world that does not have a national military its military answers only to a political party the Chinese Communist Party For a brief period in the mid twentieth century China had the makings of a professional apolitical military force The Rise and Fall of an Officer Corps tells the story of that moment in the military history of modern China how it came to be why it ultimately failed and what it meant for China at home and abroad Between 1942 and 1955 a cadre of highly trained nationalistic and cosmopolitan Chinese officers created a professional depoliticized military a force that could effectively represent the aspirations of China as a world power Drawing on multiple archival sources and Chinese military journals author Eric Setzekorn charts the development of this new army as a critical cultural and political force with extensive connections to foreign powers During this period military officers were the primary actors in an intergovernmental partnership between the United States and the Republic of China The partnership gave officers access to educational opportunities and technological transfers that were central to their professional ideals Setzekorn s account of the career of General Sun Li jen an American educated Chinese army officer illustrates the rise of this new sense of professionalism as well as its decline after 1953 Setzekorn then traces the failure of the army building project to a renewed politicization of military forces marked by a purge of key military leaders in 1955 by Chiang Kai shek and his Koumintang KMT party By focusing on this important chapter in Chinese military history Setzekorn s work also highlights broader patterns of military transformation during the pivotal period from World War II through the early Cold War His work is critical to understanding the rise of China as a military and world power
