minorities and the conduct of professional classes Vasey is the first scholar to document fully how the demands of the global market frequently dictated film content and created the movies homogenized picture of social and racial characteristics in both urban America and the world beyond She uncovers telling evidence of scripts and treatments that were abandoned before or during the course of production because of content that might offend foreign markets Among the fascinating points she discusses is Hollywood's frequent use of imaginary countries as story locales resulting from a deliberate business policy of avoiding realistic depictions of actual countries She argues that foreign governments perceived movies not just as articles of trade but as potential commercial and political emissaries of the United States Just as Hollywood had to persuade its domestic audiences that its products were morally sound its domination of world markets depended on its ability to create a culturally and politically acceptable product
