How National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) Can Contribute in Creating a Sustainable and Healthy Community

An Investigation of planning system in the UK helping to create a healthy, sustainable community?
Department of Policy Making University of Cambridge – Christopher, Leo, Roha

Abstract

Sustainable communities are directly facilitated by the types of constructions employed in a region. Building structures significantly promote sustainable communities since they consume a high percentage of communal dwellings. Furthermore, constructions mainly contribute to other issues like drainages, communal spaces, and air due to their means of construction. This study aims to assess the mechanisms employed in the architectural field in promoting sustainable communities by adopting appropriate policies that support sustainability in regions (Lee et al., 2013).

Background

Africa needs smart airports to improve the experience of travelers. By not having smart airports in place, travelers must go through rigorous checking, which could have been avoided if the government had invested in creating a smart airport. Furthermore, the study must highlight the problem of lack of liberalization in African airports. Therefore, lack of liberalization leads to decreased air service

Introduction

The dynamics of urban growth have become very complex over the years. This aspect owes to the fact that the approach to planning and developing an area in relation to its surroundings has to consider the elements that improve the living conditions of people (Richmond and Manokore, 2011). The style promotes significant societal developments that attract and retain people in a particular region. This study uses a sustainable
