Tradition Ulysses and the Poetics of Cognition Patrick Colm Hogan, 2013-09-05 Given Ulysses perhaps unparalleled attention to the operations of the human mind it is unsurprising that critics have explored the work's psychology. Nonetheless there has been very little research that draws on recent cognitive science to examine thought and emotion in this novel. Hogan sets out to expand our understanding of Ulysses as well as our theoretical comprehension of narrative and even our views of human cognition. He revises the main narratological accounts of the novel, clarifying the complex nature of narration and style. He extends his cognitive study to encompass the anti-colonial and gender concerns that are so obviously important to Joyce's work. Finally, through a combination of broad overviews and detailed textual analyses, Hogan seeks to make this notoriously difficult book more accessible to non-specialists.

Christianity in the Modern World Dr. Giselle Vincett, Dr. Elijah Obinna, 2014-09-28 The divergent and oftentimes contradictory state of Christianity in the modern world fuels questions about its place and future in the world in politics, education, healthcare, and even in sport. This book brings together cutting-edge research on the most recent changes and trends in Christianity worldwide. Contributors drawn from the USA, UK, and Europe, Africa, and East Asia offer an invaluable breadth of coverage, expertise, and disciplinary perspective at the intersections between sociology of religion, theology, politics, education, and human geography.

Rausch, 2006 Thomas Rausch's book Being Catholic in a Culture of Choice examines a number of recent studies of young adult Catholics as well as different ways that being Catholic is developed and supported from the Catholic imagination to a reexamination of Christian origins in the light of the charges made in The Da Vinci Code to the domestic church and Catholic colleges and universities.

Chicago Catholics and the Struggles within Their Church Andrew M. Greeley, 2011-12-31 What might one expect to learn from a probability sample study of the Archdiocese of Chicago? Can one form a national portrait of Catholics in the United States from data about Chicago? Certainly Chicago is unique in its judgments about its clergy. As the eminent Catholic sociologist Andrew M. Greeley argues, it is this very difference that makes rigorous comparisons between Chicago Catholics and other Catholic subpopulations possible. He suggests that history and geography provide a basis for understanding the development of the Catholic Church, not just in this specific area but also in the entire United States. The Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago is composed of two counties, Lake and Cook. At the same time, the Catholic population has been pushed up against the boundary of DuPage County by racial change in the city, so that much of the west and south side Catholic population of the city has moved into the southern and western suburbs. In this research area, half of the Catholics have attended college, and half of those have attended graduate school. Thus, the conventional image of Chicago as a mix of ethnic immigrant neighborhoods has to be modified, although there are still many new immigrants attending special immigrant parishes. Greeley argues that the official church in Chicago, and by inference elsewhere, has not recognized the community structures that permeate the neighborhoods, that it does not grasp the religious stories that shape its people's identity, and that it does not understand the intense, if selective, loyalty of the archdiocese to its leadership. As part of this argument Greeley includes transcriptions of in depth interviews with former Catholics This study provides a fascinating window into the world of Catholicism in twenty first century urban America
