

Diverse people, diverse identities

- When we talk about diversity, we don't just talk about race and ethnicity.
- Diversity includes all different people, each contributing their own uniqueness, making Britain a more interesting place to live.
- So diversity includes people of different gender, ages, sexual orientation, disability, religion, beliefs and more.
- It is important that everyone respects and celebrates each other's differences so we can all get along, learn from each other and share an exciting mix of cultures and experiences.

Composing Diverse Identities D. Jean Clandinin, Janice Huber, Marilyn Huber, M. Shaun Murphy, Anne Murray Orr, Marni Pearce, Pam Steeves, 2006-04-18 In a climate of increasing emphasis on testing measurable outcomes competition and efficiency the real lives of children and their teachers are often neglected or are too messy and intricate to legislate and quantify As such curricula are designed without including the very people that compose the identities of schools Here Clandinin takes issue with this tendency bringing together a collection of narratives from seven writers who spent a year in an urban school exploring the experiences and contributions of children families teachers and administrators These stories show us an alternative way of attending to what counts in schools shifting away from the school as a business model towards an idea of schools as places to engage citizenship and to attend to the wholeness of people s lives Articulating the complex ethical dilemmas and issues that face people and schools every day this fascinating study puts school life under the microscope raises new questions about who and what education is for

Identity is a term that shall carry an image It transports the idea that everyone is something or someone special This meaning of identity of being special and unique arised rather at contemporary times The basic character of modernity the continuous necessity to organize things according to the surrounding to handle them and the contingency of their relationship is today also ascribed to the construction of identities This means that identities are seen as contingent and fluent themselves They are permanently new constructed out of different sources that may differ in their relevance from time to time In case of war for example nationality becomes the most important source of identity Other sources such as profession or gender and sexuality have no relevance then So identities are historically specific They are produced at particular moments in history The pressure to constantly renew and modify identities also leads to diverse problems It is felt that identity is in crisis because old certainties no longer obtain This causes confusion One way to deal with this is to analyse out of which components identity is produced to be able to identify the set of conditions that construct liveable subject positions

The Two Majorities and the Puzzle of Modern American Politics Byron E. Shafer, 2003 Where did the Era of Divided Government come from What sustains split partisan control of the institutions of American national government year after year Why can it shift so easily from Democratic or Republican presidencies coupled with Republican or Democratic Congresses How can the vast array of issues and personalities that have surfaced in American politics over the last forty years fit so neatly within indeed reinforce the sustaining political pattern of our time These big questions constitute the puzzle of modern American politics The old answer a majority and a minority party plus dominant and recessive public issues will not work in the Era of Divided Government Byron Shafer a political scientist who is regarded as one of the most comprehensive and original thinkers on American politics provides a convincing new answer that has three major elements These elements in combination not divided government as a catch phrase are the real story of politics in our time The first element is comprised of two great sets of public preferences that manifest themselves at the ballot box as two majorities The old cluster of economic and welfare issues has not so much been displaced as simply joined by a second cluster of cultural and national concerns The second element can be seen in the behavior of political parties and party activists whose own preferences don t match those of the general public That public remains reliably left of the active Republican Party on economic and welfare issues and reliably right of the active Democratic Party on cultural and national concerns The third crucial element is found in an institutional arrangement the distinctively American matrix of governmental institutions which converts those first two elements into a framework for policymaking year in and year out In the first half of the book Shafer examines how dominant features of the Reagan first Bush Clinton and second Bush administrations reflect the interplay of these three elements Recent policy conflicts and institutional combatants in Shafer s analysis illuminate this new pattern of American politics In the second half he ranges across time and nations to put these modern elements and their composite pattern into a much larger historical and institutional framework In this light modern American politics appears not so much as new and different but as a distinctive recombination of familiar elements of a political style a political process and a political conflict that has been running for a much much longer time
