Diving Into Heart:

Diving Into Heart Gurdeep Pandher, 2001-10-01 This passionate presentation of love songs creates waves in the ocean of emotions ignites the nerves to shiver and thrills the souls The poet looks into the crystal ball of his imagination and reveals lyrics which give readers thoughts a free play The physiological consequences of breath-hold diving in marine mammals; the Scholander legacy Andreas Fahlman, Breath hold diving marine mammals are able to remain submerged for prolonged periods of time and dive to phenomenal depths while foraging A number of physiological biochemical and behavioral traits have been suggested that enable this life style including the diving response lung collapse increased O₂ stores diving induced hypometabolism and stroke and glide behavior to reduce dive metabolic cost Since the initial studies by Scholander in the 1940 s when most of the physiological and biochemical traits were suggested few have received as much study as the diving response and O₂ management The calculated aerobic dive limit cADL was an important concept which allowed calculation of the aerobic dive duration and was defined as the total O₂ stores divided by the rate of O₂ consumption metabolic rate The total O₂ stores have been defined for several species and studies in both forced and freely diving animals have refined the metabolic cost of diving Currently there appears to be little consensus about whether marine mammals perform a significant proportion of dives exceeding the cADL or not and there may be large differences between species The diving response is a conserved physiological trait believed to arise from natural selection The response includes diving induced bradycardia peripheral vasoconstriction and altered blood flow distribution While the response results in reduced cardiac work it is not clear whether this is required to reduce the overall metabolic rate An alternate hypothesis is that the primary role of the diving bradycardia is to regulate the degree of hypoxia in skeletal muscle so that blood and muscle O₂ stores can be used more efficiently Scholander suggested that the respiratory anatomy of marine mammals resulted in alveolar collapse at shallow depths lung collapse thereby limiting gas exchange This trait would limit uptake of N₂ and thereby reduce the risk of inert gas bubble formation and decompression sickness In his initial treatise Scholander suggested that alveolar collapse probably made inert gas bubble formation unlikely during a single dive but that repeated dives could result in significant accumulation that could be risky Despite this lung collapse has been quoted as the main adaptation by which marine mammals reduce N₂ levels and inert gas bubble formation It was surprising therefore when recent necropsy reports from mass stranded whales indicated DCS like symptoms More recent studies have shown that live marine mammals appear to experience bubbles under certain circumstances These results raise some interesting questions For example are marine mammals ever at risk of DCS and if so could N₂ accumulation limit dive performance While an impressive number of studies have provided a theoretical framework that explains the mechanistic basis of the diving response and O₂ management many questions remain some widely accepted ideas actually lack sufficient experimental confirmation and a variety of marine mammal species potentially novel models for elucidating new diving adaptations are understudied The aim of this Frontiers Topic is to provide a synthesis of the current knowledge about the physiological responses of marine mammals that underlie their varied dive behavior We also include novel contributions that challenge current ideas and that probe new hypotheses utilize new experimental approaches and explore new model species We show that the field has recently entered a phase of renewed discovery that is not only unraveling more secrets of the natural diving response but will drive new applications to aid human exploration of the ocean depths We also welcome comparative analyses especially contributions that compare marine mammals with human divers

Margaret F. Werts, Charles W. Shilling, 2012-12-06 This volume is the third annotated bibliography on this subject area to be compiled by these authors The first published by Gordon and Breach Science Publishers in 1971 was entitled AN ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY ON DIVING AND SUBMARINE MEDICINE It covered material published during the 1960 s The second volume entitled UNDERWATER MEDICINE AND RELATED SCIENCES A GUIDE TO THE LITERATURE published in 1973 by Plenum Press covered primarily material published during 1970 and 1971 with some material from 1968 and 1969 The present volume covers material published during 1972 and 1973 but here again some earlier material has been included The purpose of these annotated bibliographies is to make available a large proportion of the published material in abstract form indexed in such a manner as to make it possible to compile a reasonably complete annotated bibliography on any specific subject area in the field It is possible thus to learn where the work is being done by whom and how extensively Also it becomes obvious what areas of research are lacking or inadequate These specific searches can also form a background of reference material on which to base further research or from which to write monographs or state of the art surveys Papers articles and reports listed here are in most cases readily available in different species to demonstrate how evolution creates diversity This approach encourages students to appreciate the underlying principles that govern physiological systems The Experimental Emphasis helps students to understand the process of scientific discovery and shows how our knowledge of physiology continually increases and finally the Integrative Approach presents information about specific physiological systems at all levels of organisation from molecular interactions to interactions between an organism and its environment n included A Reference Handbook of the Medical Sciences Embracing the Entire Range of Scientific and Allied Sciences Albert Henry Buck,1885
