ABSTRACT

Divorce phenomenon all across the globe has shown significant increases, which also happens in Indonesia. Based on records from the Supreme Court, there were 480,618 divorces cases in 2019, with 25% cases filed by the husbands and 75% cases filed by the wives. This study aims to identify divorce decision making process in Javanese women from social, cultural, and gender perspective using literature review and survey. The survey was conducted because the literature on this topic was limited. Survey was conducted by an author to 78 Javanese women aged 20-50 years have filed divorce to their husband and have children shows results that support the previous research. Criteria for Javanese women here are born from Javanese ethnic or descendants of Javanese people, have Javanese identity like a name that still uses Javanese idiom, practising Javanese obsolete cultural values, and also live in a family that still upholds this Javanese tradition. The literature reviews shows result that gender role still plays a major part, where women is a "guard" which responsible for every house chores, child bearing and obey her husband, makes women often got blamed when divorce happened and treated as incapable of taking care her husband's dignity and her marriage life. The survey results show these women considered external factors such as children, family reputation, and social status (stigma of being a widow). A conclusion that could be taken from this literature review is that it is not easy to file a divorce for Javanese women, which eventually made them stay in their marital conflict to avoid divorce, because their Javanese culture really upholds marriage value.

1. INTRODUCTION

Married couples certainly hope for a harmonious and lasting marriage until the end of their life, but in the marriage journey, conflicts often arise that cannot be resolved. The inability to resolve marital conflicts continues, causing husband and wife to take the solutions with divorce. Marriage dissolution can be caused by death, divorce and by court decision (UU No. 1 tahun 1974). The divorce phenomenon has shown an increase worldwide, this also happens in Indonesia. In Indonesia, based on data cited www.detik.com [1] from the website of the Supreme Court (MA) in 2020, divorce rate from 2015 to 2019 shows an increase. In 2017 there were 374,400 divorce cases, while in 2019 increased to 480,618 cases. The data also shows that the number for cerai gugat from the wife side is higher every year than the cerai talak from husband side. In 2018 there were 307,700 cerai gugat, while the number cerai talak was 111,400 [1]. In East Java, the Surabaya High Religious Court recorded that divorce rate throughout 208 reached around 121,000 cases and was among the highest for divorces. In Surabaya, there were 5,235 divorce cases throughout 2018, of which 3,785 filed for cerai gugat (www.jgpm.com) [2].

Proulx [3] has conducted research to investigate psychological experiences and triggers for divorce decisions by reviewing the social exchange theory developed by Albert & Kunz [4] which states that the marital dissolution or divorce present a rational choice model by comparing costs and benefits and neglected affection elements. Proulx found that self-development (personal growth) and self-concept as a struggle from self-conflict to strengthen divorce decision-making.
