Cab At The Door:

A Cab at the Door Victor Sawdon Pritchett,1968 The title of his first memoir A CAB AT THE DOOR refers to the many times as a boy that he was awakened to find a cabby and his horse coughing together outside the house and the next thing we knew we were driving to an underground station and to a new house in a new part of London to the smell of new paint and new mice dirt Given the vicissitudes of his father s business endeavors and his efforts to dodge his creditors by the time Pritchett was twelve the family had had eighteen different addresses Pritchett started school in industrial South London at the age of eight and at fifteen he left school to work in the leather trade His four years with the leather factors essentially coincided with World War I and the bombing of London by Zeppelins After Pritchett recovered from an extended illness first brought on by influenza he resolved to escape the constant family upheaval and pursue his destiny in Paris A Cab at the Door & Midnight Oil V. S. Pritchett,1994-07-12 Two enchanting memoirs from V S Pritchett available for the first time in a single volume A Cab at the Door originally published in 1968 recalls his childhood in turn of the century and World War I London with the urbane subtlety and wry humor that have marked his other works For the wild and eccentric Pritchett family life is a series of cabs waiting at the door to transport them to a succession of ten bob a week lodgings in their flight from creditors and the financial disasters of their father A Cab at the Door also captures the texture and color of the working class side of Edwardian England Midnight Oil which Wilfrid Sheed called a little Rolls Royce of a book when it came out in 1972 opens in 1921 Pritchett arrives in Paris to commence with a literary career Gradually his creative sensibilities emerge as he travels as a reporter to Ireland Spain and America Midnight Oil provides an intimate and precise record of a writer s discovery of himself and his art Pritchett is one of the great pleasure givers in our language said Eudora Welty A cab at the door Victor S.
