The Influence of Business Associations in the European Decision Making Process Uli Bethke, 2006-01-20 Inhaltsangabe Abstract Since the adoption of the Single European Act SEA in 1986 more and more competencies have been transferred by EU Member States to decision makers in Brussels Beside the objective of the completion of the Single Market the scope of Community policies has widened to political co operation technological development and social policy In addition the powers of the European Parliament were strengthened and qualified majority voting was introduced for decisions related to the completion of the internal market Since the summits of Maastricht and Amsterdam European integration has further gained in momentum National governments again handed over sovereignty to the European level Jacques Delors famous quote that 80% of regulations impacting on the economic sphere were decided in Brussels today demonstrates the shift of competency Within the last 15 years Brussels has become an important centre of power This transference of power to the European level also has affected the behaviour of interest groups Before 1986 it usually was sufficient to lobby the own national administration in order to influence regulations The main function of European peak organisations at the time was on the one hand to monitor events in Brussels and report them back to their member federations on the other hand they formed a transnational network for the exchange of information The growing power of European institutions and the strengthening of the supranational element within the European Union required interest groups to broaden their participation in the European decision making process In addition the technical problems regarding the realisation of the internal market e.g harmonisation of services standardisation of products etc has triggered off an enormous demand for technical input on the side of the European institutions Since the adoption of the SEA thus interest groups have proliferated New groups with new interests have emerged Long established organisations have increased their financial and personnel resources After Washington D C Brussels has become the second biggest boomtown for lobbying activities In 1992 the Commission has estimated that approximately 3000 special interest groups with a total of 10 000 lobbyists try to influence the institutions of the European Union The directory of interest groups lists 891 European peak organisations Beside these Eurogroups a myriad form of actors all trying to get Solving European Business Problems Business International S.A.,1977

The Influence of Business Associations in the European Decision Making Process - A Case Study of the European Chamber of Commerce and Industry Uli Bethke,2007-08 Diploma Thesis from the year 2000 in the subject Politics International Politics Topic European Union grade 1.5 A Free University of Berlin Otto Suhr Institute Berlin 97 entries in the bibliography language English abstract Overview Research on the role of Eurogroups in general and on European business associations in particular is very rare There has been a rapid expansion of such activities lobbying over the last few years However although this phenomenon has attracted a lot of attention there is surprisingly little systematic research on the topic Andersen and Eliassen 1991 In contrast to the role of interest groups in the US legislative process comparatively little is known about their role in Brussels Only a minority of the great many Eurogroups has been under examination by researchers so far While the European Trade Union Confederation ETUC has attracted considerable attention research has neglected the European confederation of employers and industry UNICE Hardly any studies are available on the multitude of business associations practically no research has been carried out on the role of consultants law firms and multinational corporations Objective The objective of the case study is to determine the influence EUROCHAMBRES as a business association representing SMEs has on the European decision making process It will provide answers to the following questions What are business associations What is the European decision making process What are the criteria and factors that determine the influence of interest groups on the policy process in general and on the EU decision making process in particular What are the indicators that tell us whether an interest organisation can meet these factors of influence In how far does EUROCHAMBRES meet the criteria that are relevant for influence in the European decision making process Solving European Business Problems Business International Corporation,1968
