

FEATHER STITCH

SPANISH KNOTTED FEATHER STITCH

MAIDENHAIR STITCH

Maidenhair stitch is worked in straight rows on both sides and even-weave fabric. Its unusual name derives from the delicate, tapered line it produces, which has an almost hair-like quality. It is a variation of simple feather stitch (page 17) and looks equally effective worked on a small or large scale.

To work the stitch evenly, either choose an even-weave fabric and count the threads, or mark a central guideline on plain-weave fabric with tailor's chalk or a special water-soluble marker. Use a quill, lightweight thread such as cotton 12 for the best results.

Bring the thread through at the top of the line. Then work three single feather stitches at the top of the line. Gradually the lengths of these stitches, making sure that they line up vertically, then a similar group of stitches at the right of the line. Repeat along the line.

MAIDENHAIR STITCH

Bring the thread through at the top of the line to be worked. Then an equal count to the top of the center line with your left hand. Then work a tapered line, as shown in the diagram, by pulling the needle through over the top of the line, counting the number and the length of the stitches. Repeat along the line.
