Corporate Social Responsibility and Organizational Psychology: Quid pro Quo Ante Glavas, Chelsea R. Willness, David A. Jones, 2017-07-05 Researchers corporate leaders and other stakeholders have shown increasing interest in Corporate Social Responsibility CSR a company's discretionary actions and policies that appear to advance societal well being beyond its immediate financial interests and legal requirements Spanning decades of research activity the scholarly literature on CSR has been dominated by meso and macro level perspectives such as studies within corporate strategy that examine relationships between firm level indicators of social environmental performance and corporate financial performance In recent years however there has been an explosion of micro oriented CSR research conducted at the individual level of analysis especially with respect to studies on how and why job seekers and employees perceive and react to CSR practices This micro level focus is reflected in 12 articles published in this edited volume as a research topic collection in Frontiers in Psychology Organizational Psychology Specialty Section titled Corporate social responsibility and organizational psychology Quid pro quo Flagships or phase-out models for climate change communication? An analysis of the effects of climate change imagery on the audience Jana Mengede, 2021-12-23 Master's Thesis from the year 2021 in the subject Communications Mass Media grade 1 2 SRH Mobile University language English abstract As climate change is a development that happens slowly and is widely invisible many photographers have made it their mission to visualize its causes and impacts on society Since the early 2000s they have established visual synecdoches by using repetitive formulas for their images to show the vulnerability of natural and human systems Whereas such repetition creates awareness and recognition within society still there is also criticism that any attempt to visualize climate change often leads to the same representations of melting ice Polar Bears or natural disasters The purpose of this work is to find out which repetitive motives are used by the media and how these motives affect the people By means of a mixed method approach it examines if the flagships of climate change imageries such as the polar bear still promote salience to the audience and if images of climate change solutions evoke positive feelings and can therefore be considered as motivating In order to answer the question which climate change imageries are used by the media a quantitative analysis of image types according to Grittmann and Ammann is conducted This analysis shows that there are leading motives which are repetitively used as visualizations to accompany online news reports among them mainly images of causes smokestacks and impacts wildfire ice imagery and extreme weather The media rarely report on climate change solutions In a second step a sample of ten images of these leading motives is selected for the explorative research of image effects By means of the Visual Communication Process Model Mller Kappas and Olk it examines how people visually perceive these images how they understand and interpret them and what emotions they cause The effects are measured with a self administered online questionnaire The results of the survey reveal that the repetition of motives and the use of flagships does not lead to climate fatigue Anyway there is only one solution imagery that clearly verifies the positive effects on the self efficacy level of the audience Although such imageries receive attention on social media they have not reached the mass media so far which could serve as a starting point for future research Safety, Reliability, Risk and Life-Cycle Performance of Structures and Infrastructures George Deodatis, Bruce R. language English abstract The institution of insurance as it is known today has been largely neglected by sociologists even though it is the central institution alongside government responsible for risk management Ericson et al 2003 44 A central focus of risk management is the protection of society from damage caused by natural hazards This thesis aims to frame insurance and other institutions involved with risk management into a particular viewpoint of social problems Natural hazards constitute the largest shore of the market for insurance while at the same time pose the largest challenge for the institution One may question why this is so Well into the 21st century anthropogenic climate change or global warming is no longer merely a theory it has become reality International reinsurers scientists and politicians agree that anthropogenic CO₂ and other gases are increasing the temperature on earth Consequentially natural hazards are increasing in frequency and impact Munich Re 2009 This poses problems for societies dealing with impacts from natural hazards Much research has been done on individual behavior in deciding whether or not to insure against natural hazards Kunreuther 2004 Kerjan 2008a Grace 2006 This line of research views individual as myopic in assessing risk thereby underestimating risk and the relevance of insurance The emphasis of this research is mostly on the irrationality of individuals as regards the benefits of insurance This perspective fails to take into account the influence of societal institutions on individual decisions for example whether or not to insure against disasters Theoretical exercises in this direction are common whereas attempts to consider the environment of a specific risk management system are rare Michael Huber s observation 2004a represents an exception as it describes the institutional arrangement for the management of floods in England while emphasizing the influence it has on insurability The assumption that institutions exercise an effect on the insurability of natural hazards remains central Generally when regarding natural hazards one can differentiate between those affected and those unaffected by anthropogenic climate change Natural hazards which are not amplified by global warming are earthquakes volcano eruptions and tsunamis Munich Re 2009 Global Warming in Local Discourses: How Communities around the World Make Sense of Climate Change Michael Brüggemann, Simone Rödder, 2020-12-08 Global news on anthropogenic climate change is shaped by international politics scientific reports and voices from transnational protest movements This timely volume asks how local communities engage with these transnational discourses The chapters in this volume present a range of compelling case studies drawn from a broad cross section of local communities around the world reflecting diverse cultural and geographical contexts From Greenland to northern Tanzania it illuminates how different understandings evolve in diverse cultural and geographical contexts while also revealing some common patterns of how people make sense of climate change Global Warming in Local Discourses constitutes a significant new contribution to understanding the multi perspectivity of our debates on climate change further highlighting the need for interdisciplinary study within this area It will be a valuable resource to those studying climate and science communication those interested in understanding the various roles played by journalism NGOs politics and science in shaping public understandings of climate change as well as those exploring the intersections of the global and the local in debates on the sustainable transformation of societies

Hydro-Environmental Analysis James L. Martin, 2013-12-04 Focusing on fundamental principles Hydro Environmental Analysis Freshwater Environments presents in depth information about freshwater environments and how they are influenced by regulation It provides a holistic approach exploring the factors that impact water quality and quantity and the regulations policy and management methods that are necessary to maintain this vital resource It offers a historical viewpoint as well as an overview and foundation of the physical chemical and biological characteristics affecting the management of freshwater environments The book concentrates on broad and general concepts providing an interdisciplinary foundation The author covers the methods of measurement and classification chemical physical and biological characteristics indicators of ecological health and management and restoration He also considers common indicators of environmental health characteristics and operations of regulatory control structures applicable laws and regulations and restoration methods The text delves into rivers and streams in the first half and lakes and reservoirs in the second half Each section centers on the characteristics of those systems and methods of classification and then moves on to discuss the physical chemical and biological characteristics of each In the section on lakes and reservoirs it examines the characteristics and operations of regulatory structures and presents the methods commonly used to assess the environmental health or integrity of these water bodies It also introduces considerations for restoration and presents two unique aquatic environments wetlands and reservoir tailwaters Written from an engineering perspective the book is an ideal introduction to the aquatic and limnological sciences for students of environmental science as well as students of environmental engineering It also serves as a reference for engineers and scientists involved in the management regulation or restoration of freshwater environments
