

HERVEY ALLEN

From the publication of his Discourse on the Spanish in 1844, when he was in the Spanish Guard serving in the Mexican States, Hervey Allen has been a valued figure among American writers. His first story, "The Boy of the Island" was recognized as one of the best work of the American romance of the time, and in 1848, his Discourse: The Life and Times of Miguel Allen has been generally recognized as the definitive work on its subject. His second volume of poetry has been widely praised.

Born in Pennington, Pa. in 1816, at an early age, Allen was English and, as a student at the University of London, he was elected to the U. S. Naval Academy. He spent five years in the United States, but returned to England in 1840. He was elected to the University of Pennington and became a member of the Senate in 1842. He was elected by the Ball Tavern, Pennington, for nine years as poet laureate and classical reader.

From 1842, when he returned to the National Guard, until the opening of the American Civil War, he was almost constantly active abroad. He was elected to the U. S. S. in the Government of Alabama in 1846, he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1848, and he was elected to the Senate in 1850. He was elected to the House of Representatives in 1852, and he was elected to the Senate in 1854.

His first collection of poetry, The Poems of Hervey Allen, was published in 1844, and it was the first of a series of volumes. His second collection, The Poems of Hervey Allen, was published in 1848, and it was the first of a series of volumes. His third collection, The Poems of Hervey Allen, was published in 1852, and it was the first of a series of volumes. His fourth collection, The Poems of Hervey Allen, was published in 1856, and it was the first of a series of volumes.

In the summer of 1848 he went to the States and lived about the States in an old Spanish style, building for a place to live. The house was built with stone and was the first house of that style in which he ever lived.

It was at Pennington in 1848 that Hervey Allen first met the poetess who was the central figure of the romance which he wrote. With her name and his own, Hervey Allen wrote some poems in "The Boy of the Island" in all three volumes in the Discourse, where they are at intervals. Hervey Allen was the first to see her, and he was the first to see her in the States. He was the first to see her in the States, and he was the first to see her in the States.

Originally designed to appear in three separate volumes, the publisher has combined the book for broader financial results, and in one volume in the convenient and readable in the public.
