Asian Economic Trends And Their Security Implications:

Asian Economic Trends and Their Security Implications, 2000 This report is the final product of a project dealing with the security implications of Asia's financial and economic turmoil. After considering the sharp economic reversals suffered in the Asian region in 1997 and 1998 and the marked but widely varying evidence of significant recovery among the different countries of the region, the report considers the medium and longer term trends with respect to economic growth, military spending, and military investment in five countries in the greater Asian area: Japan, China, India, South Korea, and Indonesia. The five countries included in this study were selected by agreement with the sponsors from a larger set addressed in RAND's previous analyses in 1989 and 1995 of long term economic and military trends. India, a South Asian country, was included along with the four principal East Asian countries in light of its size and enhanced military prominence. The new turn in India's economic policies and performance in the last decade of the twentieth century, the success of Indian enterprise in the post-WTO world, the emergence of a confident professional middle class, a demonstrated nuclear capability, and the resilience of an open society and an open economy in the face of multiple and complex challenges have all shaped India's response to the tectonic shifts in the global balance of power in the post-Cold War era. In this collection of academic essays and newspaper columns, Baru explores the business of diplomacy and the diplomacy of business in a rising India. The role of India's cultural and intellectual soft power in shaping global perceptions of India are examined. The book offers a panoramic view of the geopolitics and the geo-economics of India's recent rise as a free market democracy and as such will interest both experts and lay readers. U.S. National Security Implications of Chinese Involvement in Latin America R. E. Ellis, 2005 In this monograph the author argues that China's pursuit of long-term strategic objectives is leading the country to increase its presence in Latin America with serious national security implications for the United States. Sustained Chinese economic growth requires ever greater quantities of basic commodities such as petroleum products coal iron and steel and strategic minerals As the new generation of Chinese leadership under Hu Jintao has moved away from the more cautious approach of his predecessor Jiang Zemin China has begun to aggressively court Latin America as its principal source of supply outside Asia Figures from the Chinese National Statistics Office show that for example 77 percent of all Chinese foreign investment outside Asia in 2003 went to Latin America The pattern of Chinese investment in countries such as Argentina Brazil and Chile suggests that the Asian giant is seeking to assure access to critical commodities by constructing vertically integrated supply networks over which it has leverage China is purchasing interest in key Latin American suppliers such as the Canadian minerals firm Noranda or the Argentine oil subsidiary PlusPetrol Norte It is also building cooperative relationships with supplier governments such as the joint oil exploration and refinery construction deals signed with Venezuela and Brazil in 2004 Where necessary China is also investing in the infrastructure of Latin American countries to help them more effectively bring their products to market In addition to documenting China s aggressive new posture in specific Latin American countries this monograph argues that the expanded Chinese trade and investment presence in the region ultimately will give China a stake in the politics of the region and may tempt it to become involved in the region s security affairs Expanded Chinese trade and investment in Latin America for example will expand greatly the community of Chinese nationals in the region

Recalibrating Alliance Contributions Tatsuro Yoda,2005 According to the U S National Security Strategy the United States needs to strengthen alliances to defeat global terrorism and work to prevent attacks against us and our friends This dissertation develops an analytic framework to explore ways to encourage contributions from allies that are beneficial to the United States with specific reference to Japan s Host Nation Support program HNS for the U S Forces in Japan The author examines Japan's alliance contributions, the background environment of the U.S. Japan alliance during the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s, and key causes for the change in Japan's alliance contributions. He analyzes the future of the U.S. Japan alliance over the next 10-20 years, the plausible direction of changes in Japan's alliance contributions, and how the U.S. can influence that direction. Finally, he examines the short-term future of the alliance, focusing on the next Special Measures Agreement for the HNS in 2006, Japan's stance toward that agreement, and effective U.S. negotiating tactics. Chinese Policy Priorities and Their Implications for the United States. Robert G. Sutter, 2000. How the West responds to China's emergence as a great power will go far toward determining the course of world politics. Yet, as Robert Sutter shows, U.S. foreign policy in this vital arena remains remarkably unfocused and uninformed. Preoccupied with domestic imperatives and an intractable debate over China, the U.S. government, media, and public have all but ignored the interests and motivations of China's leaders. The author argues that a balanced understanding of Chinese government priorities will lead to more informed and effective policy. Toward that goal, this pragmatic study examines current Chinese concerns and behavior in arenas of crucial importance to the United States. Asian Perspective, 1986. Journal of International Development.
