1. State the hypotheses and identify the claim. The claim is that the mean number of chocolate chips is greater than the mean number of nonchocolate chips. The null hypothesis is that the mean number of chocolate chips is equal to the mean number of nonchocolate chips. The alternative hypothesis is that the mean number of chocolate chips is greater than the mean number of nonchocolate chips.

2. Find the critical value(s). The critical value is $t = 1.645$.

3. Compute the test value. The test value is $t = 2.14$.

4. Make the decision. The test value is greater than the critical value, so the null hypothesis is rejected.

5. Summarize the results. There is sufficient evidence to support the claim that the mean number of chocolate chips is greater than the mean number of nonchocolate chips.
