Bodleian Library:

A Brief History of the Bodleian Library Mary Clapinson, 2015 The Bodleian Library was founded in 1602 at the University of Oxford It is one of the oldest libraries in Britain the first library to request a copyright edition of every book published in English and its original beautiful seventeenth century rooms are still in use today Spanning over four hundred years this succinct account illustrated with historical prints portraits of formidable librarians and photographs of some of the Library's most treasured items traces the development of the Bodleian's superb collections and historic buildings from its foundation by Sir Thomas Bodley to the celebration of the quatercentenary of its opening Each chapter reveals fascinating details about the lives and eccentricities of the people who have shaped the development of the Library including Bodley's vision that it would serve the republic of the learned Charles I's request to borrow a book the story of how the Library came to have not one but two editions of Shakespeare's First Folio and the fiasco surrounding King George VI's opening of the New Bodleian in 1946 In addition this book chronicles the perennial search for more space including the use of underground passages as the number of books continued to grow totalling over 11 million by the twenty first century It shows how the physical expansion of the Library from the acquisition of the Radcliffe Camera to the building of individual subject libraries across Oxford is part of the story of how the Library came to be the world renowned institution it is today

Robert Thornton and His Books Susanna Fein, Michael Robert Johnston, 2014 Essays examining the compiler and contents of two of the most important and significant extant late medieval manuscript collections The Yorkshire landowner Robert Thornton c 1397 c 1465 copied the contents of two important manuscripts Lincoln Cathedral MS 91 the Lincoln manuscript and London British Library MS Additional 31042 the London manuscript in the middle decades of the fifteenth century Viewed in combination his books comprise a rare repository of varied English and Latin literary religious and medical texts that survived the dissolution of the monasteries when so many other medieval books were destroyed Residing in the texts he copied and used are many indicators of what this gentleman scribe of the North Riding read how he practised his religion and what worldly values he held for himself and his family Because of the extraordinary nature of his collected texts Middle English romances alliterative verse the alliterative Morte Arthure only exists here lyrics and treatises of religion or medicine editors and scholars have long been deeply interested in uncovering Thornton s habits as a private amateur scribe The essays collected here provide for the first time a sustained focussed light on Thornton and his books They examine such matters as what Thornton as a scribe made how he did it and why he did it placing him in a wider context and looking at the contents of the manuscripts Susanna Fein is Professor of English at Kent State University Michael Johnston is an Assistant Professor of English at Purdue University Contributors Julie Nelson Couch Susanna Fein Rosalind Field Joel Fredell Ralph Hanna Michael Johnston George R Keiser Julie Orlemanski Mary Michele Poellinger Dav Smith Thorlac Turville Petre

Ashgate Critical Essays on Early English Lexicographers Christine Franzen, 2017-03-02 The teaching of Latin remained important after the Conquest but Anglo Norman now became a language of instruction and from the thirteenth century onwards a language to be learned During this period English lexicographers were more numerous more identifiable and their works more varied for example the tremulous hand of Worcester created an Old English Latin glossary and Walter de Bibbesworth wrote a popular contextualized verse vocabulary of Anglo Norman country life and activities The works and techniques of Latin scholars such as Adam of Petit Point Alexander Nequam and John of Garland were influential throughout the period In addition grammarians and schoolmasters books preserve material which in some cases seems to have been written by them The material discussed ranges from a twelfth century glossary written at a minor monastic house to four large alphabetical fifteenth century dictionaries some of which were widely available Some material seems to connect with the much earlier Old English glossaries in ways not yet fully understood

The Responsories and Versicles of the Latin Office of the Dead Knud Ottosen, 2008-01-25 It may seem astonishing to some that there is a need for reprinting a 14 year old dissertation but the fact is that the book is exactly as relevant to scholars today as it was in 1993 It still represents the world s largest database to compare the responsories of the Office of the Dead in more than 2 000 sources Since the order of these responsories differed from church to church this order can be used to localize medieval and Renaissance liturgical books The book is therefore an absolute necessity for everyone who conducts research on the area it covers Put differently the book reveals the geography of the concept of death in Europe from the 9th 16th centuries from a theological liturgical ecclesiastical musical and political perspective seen from one particular liturgical office The Office of the Dead
