

DEHYDRATED VEGETABLES AND POWDERS

1. Introduction

Many vegetables are seasonal in nature and due to their low shelf life after harvest they are sold in the markets at very low prices. There is a considerable surplus of these vegetables which can be processed (dehydrated) for consumption during lean months. The seasonal vegetables that are in demand during lean periods are peas, cauliflower and carrots. Dehydrated powders of spinach, onion and garlic find use in the spices and food processing industries as well as in the consumer markets.

2. Market

The major market outlets are the "A" class outlets. The product also finds placement in self-service counters and departmental stores. Food processing industries purchase the product in bulk quantities. The dehydrated powders also have a good export potential.

3. Packaging

Dehydrated Vegetables and Powders are packed in tins for bulk packaging. In retail packaging, small dispensers are used.

4. Production capacity

- The plant will be in operation for three shifts a day.
- The plant will process 1500 kgs of vegetables and 500 kgs of onions and garlic per day.
- The yield of Dehydrated Vegetables and Powders will be 25% of the weight of raw material used. The total quantity of finished product per annum would be 112.5 metric tonnes of dehydrated vegetables and 37.5 metric tonnes of dehydrated onion and garlic powders.
- The time period required for achieving full capacity utilization is six months.

5. Sales revenue

- With an ex-factory selling price at Rs. 150 per kilogram for dehydrated vegetable powders, the total sales revenue will be Rs. 225.00 lakhs per annum.
