Delicate Thread Teshigaharas Life In Art:

The Delicate Thread Dore Ashton, 1997 Painter filmmaker potter calligrapher ikebana master designer and impresario Teshigahara is an artist in the fullest sense of the word In Dore Ashton s sparkling account of Teshigahara s life and work the artist shines as a seminal figure who has vaulted boundaries between the arts in a quest for new ways to express creativity No discussion of postwar Japanese visual or cinematic arts can be complete without him It was perhaps inevitable that Teshigahara s life in art would be a quest for resolution between past and present inherited and avant garde forms Japanese tradition and Western innovation As the son of the multi talented artist and ikebana master Sofu Teshigahara grew up with an acute consciousness of Japanese art history Yet he reached maturity in the wake of World War II and his artistic consciousness was forged in that crucible of intellectual and artistic energies where with young talents like Kobo Abe and Segi Shinichi he sought to rebuild a Japanese identity from the ashes of defeat His first medium was film one of the few artistic domains unexplored by his father The young Teshigahara established his name with documentaries historical dramas and adaptations of Abe s novels most notably The Woman in the Dunes During the 1960s he was the driving force behind Tokyo s alternative performance center Sogetsu Hall In the 1970s he broke new ground again establishing a pottery at Echizen only to succeed to the head of the Sofu ikebana school upon his father s death With typical exuberance Teshigahara has extended ikebana art to embrace bamboo and create applications for set design and installation Meanwhile he continues his forays into othermedia Drawing on extensive firsthand and published sources Dore Ashton traces the eclectic influences on Teshigahara She clearly sets off the dynamic tensions at play in Teshigahara s work and pays particular attention to his contemporaries essential given the artist s collaborative spirit

The Ideologies of Japanese Tea Tim Cross, 2009-09-01 This provoking new study of the Japanese tea ceremony chanoyu examines the ideological foundation of its place in history and the broader context of Japanese cultural values where it has emerged as a so called quintessential component of the culture It was in fact Sen Soshitsu XI grandmaster of Urasenke today the most globally prominent tea school who argued in 1872 that tea should be viewed as the expression of the moral universe of the nation A practising teamaster himself the author argues however that tea was many other things it was privilege politics power and the lever for passion and commitment in the theatre of war Through a methodological framework rooted in current approaches he demonstrates how the iconic images as supposedly timeless examples of Japanese tradition have been the subject of manipulation as ideological tools and speaks to presentations of cultural identity in Japanese society today

Radicals and Realists in the Japanese Nonverbal Arts Thomas R. H. Havens, 2006-07-31 Radicals and Realists is the first book in any language to discuss Japan s avant garde artists their work and the historical environment in which they produced it during the two most creative decades of the twentieth century the 1950s and 1960s Many of the artists were radicals rebelling against existing canons and established authority Yet at the same time they were realists in choosing concrete materials sounds and themes from everyday life for their art and in gradually adopting tactics of protest or resistance through accommodation rather than confrontation. Whatever the means of expression, the production of art was never devoid of historical context or political implication. Focusing on the nonverbal genres of painting, sculpture, dance, choreography, and music composition, this work shows that generational and political differences, not artistic doctrines, largely account for the divergent stances artists took vis-à-vis modernism, the international arts community, Japan's ties to the United States, and the alliance of corporate and bureaucratic interests that solidified in Japan during the 1960s. After surveying censorship and arts policy during the American occupation of Japan (1945–1952), the narrative divides into two chronological sections dealing with the 1950s and 1960s, bisected by the rise of an artistic underground in Shinjuku and the security treaty crisis of May 1960. The first section treats Japanese artists who studied abroad as well as the vast and varied experiments in each of the nonverbal avant-garde arts that took place within Japan during the 1950s, after long years of artistic insularity and near stasis throughout war and occupation. Chief among the intellectuals who stimulated experimentation were the art critic Takiguchi Shuzo, the painter Okamoto Taro, and the businessman painter Yoshihara Jiro. The second section addresses the multifront assault on formalism, confusingly known as anti-art, led by visual artists nationwide. Likewise, composers of both Western style and contemporary Japanese style music increasingly chose everyday themes from folk music and the premodern musical repertoire for their new presentations. Avant-garde print makers, sculptors, and choreographers similarly moved beyond the modern and modernism in their work. A later chapter examines the artistic apex of the postwar period: Osaka's 1970 world exposition, where more avant-garde music, painting, sculpture, and dance were on display than at any other point in Japan's history before or since. Radicals and Realists is based on extensive archival research, numerous concerts, performances, and exhibits, and exclusive interviews with more than fifty leading choreographers, composers, painters, sculptors, and critics active during those two innovative decades. Its accessible prose and lucid analysis recommend it to a wide readership, including those interested in modern Japanese art and culture as well as the history of the postwar years.

Installation art as experience of self, in space and time Christine Vial Kayser, Sylvie Coëllier, 2021-09-07. Installation art has modified our relationship to art for over fifty years by soliciting the whole body, demonstrating its sensitivity to space, surroundings, and the living beings with which it is constantly interacting. This book analyses this modification of perception through phenomenological approaches, invoking Husserl, Heidegger, Merleau-Ponty, as well as Levinas, Depraz, and the neuroscientist Varela. This theoretical framework is implicit in the various case studies, which revisit works that have become classic or emblematic by Carl Andre, Bruce Nauman, Dan Graham, inaugural experiments that remain available only through photographic and written archives by Jean-Michel Sanejouand, Philippe Parreno, as well as the influence of the mode in the realm of music. The book also examines the transference of this Western form to Asia, revealing how it resonates with ancient Asian representations and practices often associated with the spiritual. The distinct chapters underpin the role of space as a metaframe, the common ground of the various installations While the nature and agency of space varies from social historical space leisurely or political space inner psychological space to shared empty space these installations reveal the chiasm between the individual body and the outside space The chapters bear testimony of the process in which the physical journey of the spectator's body within a material at times invisible space and its structural components takes place in time as a succession of micro experiences Installation art as experience of self in space and time adds to the existing literature of art history a level of theoretical experiential and transcultural analysis that will make this inquiry relevant to both university students and independent researchers in the academic fields of philosophy psychology aesthetics art theory and history religious and Asian studies

Regarding the real Des O'Rawe, 2016-01-01 Regarding the real develops an original approach to documentary film focusing on its aesthetic relations to visual arts such as animation assemblage photography painting and architecture Throughout the book considers the work of figures whose preferred film language is associative and fragmentary and for whom the documentary is an endlessly open form an unstable expressive phenomenon that cannot help but interrogate its own narratives and intentions Combining close analysis with cultural history the book reassesses the influence of the modern arts in subverting structures of realism typically associated with the documentary In the course of its discussion it charts a fascinating path that leads from Len Lye to Hiroshi Teshigahara and includes along the way figures such as Joseph Cornell Johan van der Keuken William Klein Jean Luc Godard Jonas Mekas and Raymond Depardon

Human Subjectivity and Confrontation with Materials in Japanese Art Natsu Oyobe, 2005 This dissertation focuses on the remarkable approaches toward materials in art objects taken by the Japanese modernist art group the Gutai Art Association Gutai and its leader Yoshihara Jiro 1905 1972 in the mid 1950s Responding to the Japanese art community's concerns with representation of human experience and national identity Yoshihara and the Gutai members placed special emphasis on how the intervention of the artist became inscribed in the materials of the object Their recognition of the importance of the artist's engagement with materials as an expression of human presence in visual art radically departed from the contemporary Japanese art practice of representation and interpretation of the physical world By expanding the use of tools and materials beyond oil paint paintbrush and canvas Gutai transformed the practice of Japanese modernist art that had evolved in dialogue with Western art since the late 19th century In the process they grappled with the thorny issue of national identity in cultural production
